

MADERO STILL HOLDS ON DESPITE THE REQUESTS THAT HE RESIGN AT ONCE

MAJORITY OF THE SENATE CONFERRER WITH HIM THIS AFTERNOON IN PALACE TO TURN OVER REIGNS OF GOVERNMENT.

DE LA BARRA FAVORED

Meanwhile Diaz Refuses to Confer on Any Peace Terms Until He Knows Madero Has Resigned His Office.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

City of Mexico, Mexico, Feb. 15.—President Madero had not resigned his office as head of the Mexican republic late this afternoon. Meanwhile the bombardment of the palace continued, the gunners of the rebels under Diaz throwing shot and shell at it from excellent range.

Confers With Senators.

Early this afternoon Madero was closeted with the leaders of the Mexican senate, who represented the majority of that body, who were urging him to resign his office and turn state affairs over to De La Barra. What the outcome will be still is in doubt.

Situation Grave.

The situation is still most grave. The rebels apparently have not anywhere nearly exhausted their supply of ammunition while the federal troops have. Thus far the rebels have been able to repulse any attack of the federalists and also to use their long range guns to advantage in shelling their positions.

Many Flee.

The battle continued all night and daylight this morning saw many new refugees hastening from the zone of firing, with nothing but what they could carry in their hands. Diaz is also being strongly reinforced by recruits from outside the city.

Busy All Night.

The rebels in the arsenal have been in spasmodic action during the greater part of the night occasionally developing a very galling fire which provoked vigorous reply from the federal artillery.

In Darkness.

For the first time since the remarkable battle began there was a heavy sustained firing lasting one half hour in the total darkness shortly after 3:00 this morning.

People Flee.

The exodus of the populace from the district under fire was even greater than that of yesterday. There was a constant procession of people hurrying through the street to the suburbs long before dawn and this lasted until after midnight.

Commanded Office.

The officers of the Imperial were commanded by the federal troops this morning for use in their operations. The hostile forces at daybreak faced each other in virtually the same positions they have held all through the week.

Madero's Decision.

Following a conference with President Madero, Francisco de la Barra announced that Madero had authorized him and General Angeles to confer with Felix Diaz and General Manuel Monikagon on the question of arranging an armistice. Madero proposed the naming of a commission by each party to contrive a plan for a solution of the situation.

Confers With Diaz.

De la Barra immediately made a visit to the rebel position and conferred with Diaz pointing out the difficulties of the situation and urging the acceptance of the plan for an armistice in view of the imminence of foreign intervention.

Wants Cuban Marines.

The Mexican minister at Havana telegraphed to the government today asking permission for Cuban marines from the cruiser Cuba at Vera Cruz to land and go to Mexico City as a guard for the Cuban legation.

Diaz Reply.

Diaz replied to De la Barra that he could not consider an armistice and that he would enter into no negotiations for peace until he was officially notified of the resignation of President Madero, the vice president, and the entire cabinet. The reply of Diaz was then submitted to President Madero.

Lines Extended.

The rebels extended their lines shortly after 7 o'clock this morning and there was a constant shifting of positions by the federal troops. This resulted in a fresh exodus of those who had remained on the fringes of the danger zone.

More Reinforcements.

A large force of rebels commanded by General Genereve de Lao is encamped a few miles outside of the Capitol in readiness to obey the orders of Diaz. De Lao this morning issued a proclamation explaining his intentions.

Drill Recruits.

Diaz secretly sent out a number of officers today to assist in drilling the recruits under de Lao. He ordered them to maintain their position as he did not want any more men inside his lines than he could conveniently feed and he did not regard re-inforcement as essential.

May Not Resign.

Minister Lascruar declared after a meeting of the senate that it was by no means certain Madero would resign. The president, he said, was anxious to end the difficulties in a patriotic manner if possible, without further bloodshed but this appeared impossible.

Extend Lines.

At 8 o'clock the rebels persistently were extending their artillery fire sending challenging shots in all directions to draw out the federal fire. Go To Madero.

After an executive meeting in the chamber of deputies the majority of the senate left for the national palace to demand the resignation of President Madero. They were accompanied by Francisco de la Barra and the Spanish ministers to Mexico.

The Mexican senators also informed the populace that they considered that President Madero had been defeated. Throw Shells.

The rebel artillery occasionally threw shells at the national palace where the senators were endeavoring to devise a means of bringing about peace. The general bombardment of the federal positions continued steadily throughout the forenoon.

A series of sharp engagements occurred at various points. All the federal forces came into action at times with machine guns and infantry firing to which the rebels sharply replied.

More Batteries.

The government batteries in Alameda Park came into action as well as another near the Colonia railroad station and still another on San Juan de Letran street to the east of the rebel position.

Early Word.

New York, Feb. 15.—Special dispatches received here from Mexico City early this morning reported that the federalists were making a midnight attack on the arsenal and that President Madero had declared he would resign only in case the senate dictated such a course. Closing a cable communication shortly after these reports made confirmation impossible.

Rebels Active.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 15.—A general movement of rebel forces toward Juarez was begun early today according to reports arriving here. Rebel agents here have opened negotiations with the federal commander in Juarez for proclaiming a truce. Although fear trouble across the border because the federal volunteers are not disposed to join Diaz revolution.

Short On Ammunition.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The most significant feature of Ambassador Wilson's report today is the intimation that Madero is running short of ammunition. By Mr. Wilson's figure the total casualty list yesterday was six killed and forty-eight wounded. The rebels gained 500 deserters from the federal side.

No Communication.

At the White House it is stated that President Taft had sent no communication to the British minister directly or indirectly and that the position of the United States as to intervention was unchanged.

Hope For Peace.

President Taft and Secretary Knox at an early conference today were hopeful that President Madero would resign. Confidential advisers are said to show a strong sentiment throughout Mexico for peace.

Have Confidence.

Administration officials here have great confidence in the ability of De la Barra, former ambassador of the United States and provisional president after the fall of Porfirio Diaz and who has been suggested for that office if Madero steps down.

LEADS FEMALE ARMY INTO PENNSYLVANIA

Suffragist "General" Follows Washington Example by Crossing the Delaware.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Trenton, Feb. 15.—"General" Roma G. Jones, commander of the marching suffragettes, evacuated Trenton today to cross the Delaware river into Pennsylvania. Unlike the Revolutionary hero, however, she planned to lead her troops back across the river into New Jersey again the same day. Her objective point was Burlington, N. J., but the doubling of the river which by bridge instead of boat, was made necessary by the urgent demands of the women who are fighting for suffrage in Bristol, Pennsylvania, for a visit from the crusaders. The army starting from here at 9:30 o'clock thirteen strong expected to invade Bristol at noon. A twelve-mile march in all was scheduled. Two Princeton students, who marched here with the army yesterday, declared today they had been "converted to the cause" and would continue at least as far as Pennsylvania.

TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF JAMES SHERMAN

Official Washington Attends Services at Senate Chamber Today in Honor of Late Vice President.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The memory of the late vice president James S. Sherman was honored at the capitol, abandoning legislative work for the day the senate and house by special order gave up their sessions to the memorial exercises joined in by President Taft and the cabinet, the supreme court, and prominent members of the diplomatic corps.

President Taft, in accepting the invitation of the senate committee to speak at the services for the late vice president, set aside precedents of many years respecting the appearance of a president within the senate chamber when that body is in session. But for the attendance at the quadrennial inauguration no other president since Washington has spoken in the senate while that body was in session.

Arrangements had been made by the house of representatives to provide for the senate committee to speak at the services for the late vice president, set aside precedents of many years respecting the appearance of a president within the senate chamber when that body is in session. But for the attendance at the quadrennial inauguration no other president since Washington has spoken in the senate while that body was in session.

Former President Roosevelt, President-elect Wilson, Vice President-elect Marshall and former Vice President Fairbanks, Stephens and Morton had been invited to participate, but none was able to attend.

The speakers today included besides President Taft and Speaker Clark, Senators Root, O'Gorman, Oliver, Gallinger, Kern, LaFollette and Cummings.

The president said in part: "Mr. Sherman was a man with whom no one could come in contact without feeling better for the meeting and with a more kindly disposition towards his fellowmen and the world-at-large. Everyone, high or low, who met him felt the influence of his good will."

MANITOBA PREMIER SIXTY YEARS OF AGE

Sir Redmond P. Roblin, Prominently Identified with Development of Western Canada—Reciprocity Foe.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 15.—Receiving congratulations from friends throughout the province, and also from other parts of the dominion, Sir Redmond P. Roblin, premier of Manitoba, for the past twelve years, observed his sixtieth birthday anniversary today.

Premier Roblin is an Ontario man by birth, though he may fairly claim to be one of the pioneers of the great west. Foreseeing the great development which must take place in western Canada when a transcontinental railway was built, he settled in Dufferin, Manitoba, in early life, and became associated with the grain trade, eventually establishing a business in Winnipeg.

After two unsuccessful attempts he was elected to the provincial legislature in 1888. At first he was identified with the liberal party, but, becoming dissatisfied, took the other side. When the Greenway government was defeated in 1899 Mr. Roblin was given a place in Hugh J. MacDonald's cabinet, and succeeded to the leadership of the party on Mr. MacDonald's retirement the next year. In 1900 he became premier.

Since taking office Premier Roblin has had some hard problems to solve. The transportation question was one of the first with which he had to wrestle. Again, for years past he attracted the attention of all Canada by his fight for the extension of Manitoba's boundaries, from which long campaign he emerged victorious about a year ago. The premier was a most determined opponent of reciprocity with the United States and delivered a series of trenchant speeches against it in the last federal campaign.

The order was started many years ago by American citizens of German birth, who had emigrated to the United States to better their condition, and who finding many obstacles in their pathway, concluded to inaugurate an organization that should be of help to the incoming immigrant and to educate him within the precincts of the lodge room to higher patriotic ideals, to care for the widows and orphans and for the distressed everywhere, and to protect and defend the politically and religiously persecuted.

The order has built and endowed orphan homes in San Francisco, Cleveland, Atlanta, New Orleans and other cities. It has also instituted technical and manual training schools and is aiding and supporting educational and philanthropic enterprises everywhere.

FIREMEN CONSIDER ANOTHER PROPOSAL

Threatened Strike Deferred Twelve Hours As Last Resort to Arrive at Settlement.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Feb. 15.—Officers of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, deferring their threatened strike order for twelve hours at least, began a conference with federal mediators today to consider the latest proposal of the railways looking to adjustment of the controversy over wages and working conditions. It provides for arbitration under the Erdman act, but with six instead of three arbitrators as the statute provides. President Carter of the firemen indicated that he considered it irregular to increase the membership of the body provided for by federal statute, and therefore he believed the proceedings would have no legal status. Because of this he was inclined to think the proposal should be rejected by the firemen.

Reject Proposition.

Officers of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen voted unanimously today to reject the amended plan of arbitration submitted last night by fifty-four eastern railroads.

This upset all negotiations looking to peaceful settlement of the wage controversy and leaves the strike order already printed hanging on a thread. Judge Knapp expects to return here Monday afternoon.

CHURCH IN SYMPATHY WITH TRUE SCIENCE

FATHER WELSH EXPLAINS ATTITUDE ON SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

FIND MANY CATHOLICS

In the List of World's Great Scientists and Teachers All Working in Sympath With The Catholic Faith.

In answer to a question presented to Rev. O. A. Welsh, "Is it not true that all the great scientists and reformers were Protestants?" He said: "Among the last words addressed by our Lord and Saviour to His apostles before His ascension into heaven were the following: 'Go * * * and teach all nations, * * * teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and behold I am with you all days even to the consummation of the world.'"

"These words contain the commission divinely given by the church to teach all mankind. They indicate and limit the matters to be taught by Her and give Her the assurance of Divine assistance within the proper sphere of Her teaching. It is not the mission of the church to enlighten men on the scientific questions of astronomy, geology, history or any other branch of merely human or profane science, for the acquisition of which the creator has endowed man with the senses and reason, but to teach mankind the things which she has been commanded by Her Divine Founder to teach, namely, the truths that lead men to their eternal foundation."

"The Catholic church is not and cannot be opposed to science. The truths of natural science cannot contradict the truths of revelation, for the same God is the author of both. Any apparent conflict, therefore between science and religion arises from the fact that theologians have put forth their own views for the doctrines of the church, or scientists have either been ignorant of the church's teaching as put forth improved by postulates as undoubted truths."

"To come directly to the question asked, Is it not true that all the great scientists and reformers were Protestants? Absolutely no—as a matter of fact the church has rendered great service to science, as we can see from the fact that the great universities of Italy, France, England and Spain were founded before the reformation. Indeed even in the 17th century the great majority of scientists belonged to the secular and regular clergy. Among all the scientists we have great Catholic scientists. There is scarcely a science, where we do not find a Catholic name—who have brought honor to the Catholic church. In philosophical sciences, in historical and linguistic sciences, in the science of ethics and law, medical and biological science, and in the natural sciences. This surely contradicts the old saying, 'Faith is an obstacle to research, faith is contrary to the dignity of science, faith is discredited by history.' As a matter of fact up to the French revolution, when Voltaire and Rousseau drew the last consequences from atheism the great scientists almost to a man were Catholics—and speak with great reverence of God and His wonderful creation. For example Copernicus, Kepler, Galileo, Tycho, Brahe, Etc. the great chemist Lavoisier."

"Here are a few names of great Catholic scientists, Morgan whom Virchow greeted as the father of modern pathology; Anenburg who made the first step in modern diagnosis; Laeue to whom we owe most of our knowledge of diagnosis of chest diseases; Theodore Schwann, the discoverer of the cell doctrine; surely the founder of the modern biology; Claude Bernard, the great French physiologist, the late professor Dwight and the great Jesuit scientist Wassman and Louis Pasteur, prince of medical discoveries, and the Catholic Bishop scientist Stensen."

"Again such Catholic men in other fields' names familiar to all, and yet how few knew they were Catholics—Galvani, Amperre, Volt, Sir George Stokes. I do not think it too much to

The plain word atheist is too offensive and so these men have replaced it long ago by better sounding words like deistic or agnostic. WOULD MODIFY SECTIONS OF CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Feb. 15.—Many of the more stringent provisions of the corrupt practice law would be wiped out according to the terms of a bill to be introduced in the assembly on Monday evening by Assemblyman Don C. Hall of Stevens Point. A number of the sections are repealed and a phrase or so are taken out of many of the following sections. The provisions of the present law which provides that after the primary no candidate for the election to the United States senate shall make any disbursement in behalf of his candidacy is entirely repealed by the Hall bill.

SUFFRAGISTS UNVEIL BUST OF SUSAN B. ANTHONY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Feb. 15.—The memory of Susan B. Anthony, whose name is inseparably interwoven with the early history of the woman suffrage movement in America, was honored this afternoon in the unveiling of a portrait bust of her at a tea given by the suffragists' organizations at the Hotel Astor. The bust was made from life in Rome, Italy, by Mrs. Adelaide Johnson, the sculptor, when the veteran suffragist was in her prime. Mrs. Ida Husted Harper, author of the life of Susan B. Anthony, unveiled the memorial, and addresses were delivered by Mrs. Chapman-Catt, president of the War Department and the General Staff for nearly a year, was put into effect today. Some of the changes brought about by the reorganization are of a most momentous character. The territorial organization heretofore existing is discontinued and for military purposes the territory of the United States is organized into four geographical departments, Hawaii and the Philippines constituting two more. The departments are to be known as Eastern, Central, Western, and Southern—with headquarters respectively at Governor's Island, Chicago, San Francisco and San Antonio.

ESTATE OF TOLSTOI PASSING INTO HANDS OF PEASANT FARMER

Former Paid Laborers Now in Possession of Greater Part of It—Other Russian Notes.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

St. Petersburg, Feb. 15.—The peasants who worked the estate at Yasna Polyana of the late Count Leo Tolstoi are now owners of a greater part of the land they formerly tilled as paid laborers. This transfer is a carrying out of Tolstoi's conviction that the ownership of large areas of land by one individual was wrong in principle, and the project to convey this property to the Tolstoi peasants has just been put through by the executors of the estate.

Countess Tolstoi owns about 500 acres of the estate, including the park around the house and the grave of the count. About seventeen hundred acres pass to the peasants, though the full legal title will not be conveyed to them to prevent any of them selling their portions under the legislation now in force in Russia.

Count Tolstoi's sons have been provided for by the sale of other lands; it is understood that they have received about $200,000.

Emperor Endangered.
The dignity of an ambassador to a foreign court is a thing to be reckoned with. Such an envoy represents the person of his sovereign, and a slight to him is a slight to his master. Representing Russia in person, an ambassador approaches the court to which he is accredited with the proper expectation that he be received with the same degree of pomp and ceremony that would be accorded the ruler of his state were the latter personally present.

The annual celebration of "Blessing the Waters of the Neva," which occurs January 19, and in which the emperor, as head of the church, participates, was marked this year by an ambassadorial boycott, as a protest against an infraction of their diplomatic dignity. Only the ambassadors of the two republics, France and the United States, and the representative of Turkey attended; the other ambassadors absented themselves from the function at the Winter Palace, since it entails attendance at a court luncheon for which the emperor does not remain. The ambassadors, presuming themselves to be on a footing of equality with the emperor, felt they could not remain for a function for which the host does not stay. Their irritation had been fanned by an incident on the emperor's named in the diplomatic corps turned out in full force at the invitation of the ministry of the court for the church service at the Kazan Cathedral to find Russian officials of minor rank only in attendance.

It was at the blessing of the waters on January 19, that a charge of grape-shot was fired at the emperor and his cortege from a saluting cannon stationed on the opposite side of the river. A bag of bullets was in some manner slipped into the gun in front of the saluting charge, and this particular gun of the battery was turned to bear on the temporary chapel on the ice in which the ceremony takes place. After an investigation the incident was officially declared to be an accident due to a charge having been left in the gun after drill the day before, but no satisfactory explanation why the gun was aimed as it was has ever been given. To prevent accidents this year, the saluting battery was placed on one of the islands of the fortress, and the signal for the salute was conveyed to it by a rocket.

Russian Rulers on Stamps.

Russian postage stamps have heretofore never been decorated with portraits of Russian rulers, for the reason that ultra-loyal Russian postmasters object to the sacrilege involved in picking up a rubber canceling stamp covered with ink and hitting the emperor sharply in the face with it. A procedure distinctly necessary for the protection of the reverence of the postoffice department.

But the old order changes, and in spite of protests from postmasters with old-time sentiments of right and wrong, the postoffice will issue on March 6, a new series of stamps embellished with portraits of Romanoffs, sovereigns of Russia, past and present. This is the first in connection with the celebration of the third centenary of the accession of the Romanoff dynasty to the throne. The stamps of seven and ten copeck denomination, the principal ones in use for inland and foreign correspondence, respectively, bear portraits of the present emperor, Nicholas II.

Mail Steamer Held Up.

A diplomatic protest to the Greek government has resulted from an amusing "hold-up" of the Russian mail steamer "Chikacheff" on its last trip from Odessa to Alexandria by the Greek "Governor of Rhodes." The steamer was halted at sea off the island of Tenedos by rifle shots from a sloop-load of armed Greeks, and the captain, on halting, was informed that the "Governor of Rhodes" was aboard and desired the latest news. The angry sailorman refused the demand in emphatic language, resumed his voyage and on his arrival at Smyrna reported the facts to the Russian representative at Athens.

The island of Rhodes was occupied by the Italians during the Italo-Turkish war and is still held by them, so the appearance of a "Greek governor" is somewhat premature.

Monastery for Nuns.

The story of Ilodor, the "Mad monk" of Tzaritzin, who, after delving the bishops, the Holy Synod, the police and all other authorities, has been finally defrocked and sent back to his home village as an ordinary layman, passes into its last chapter with the conversion of the monastery at Tzaritzin, the scene of his exploits, into a nunnery. The monks, his adherents, have been scattered among the various other monasteries of Russia. The nuns arriving in Tzaritzin to take over the buildings, have been met by such abuse and threats by the thousands of Ilodor's followers that the convent is guarded by the police.

BETTER CONDITIONS IN WAR HOSPITALS AT CONSTANTINOPLE

Much Better Equipped to Care for Wounded Than at Beginning of War—Heroines of Cholera Camps.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Constantinople, Feb. 15.—The renewal of fighting along the Tchatalja lines and at Adrianople will bring again to Constantinople the long lines of wounded men, some in litter, others walking stoically by themselves, still others supported by hospital stewards or their own companions-in-arms. The situation, however, for those unfortunate who have improved in some ways, for today the Constantinople hospitals are better equipped to care for the wounded. Two months have passed since the fighting was discontinued to give diplomacy a chance to make peace in London, and these weeks have been utilized to make preparations of many kinds. The possibility of further fighting has never been lost sight of, and chief among the eventualities provided for has been the care of the wounded and the sick. Many of the wounded who were in the city hospitals when the armistice was declared have recovered and been discharged to return again to the firing line. The hospitals at the front have been cleared of all cases that could be moved to make room for new cases, and in Constantinople there have been established a number of infirmaries for the housing of convalescents.

The December horrors of the cholera camp at San Stefano are now happily a thing of the past. The noble and self-sacrificing work done here by devoted women and men for the suffering Turkish soldiers brought not only alleviation at the time when the situation in the camp was at its worst, but it has resulted in the establishment of better sanitary and general conditions at the camp, so that if the dread visitor cholera again makes its appearance among the Turkish soldiers at the front, place of refuge will be open for the stricken.

A Few Facts Concerning Mechano Therapy Worth Knowing

It is the science of the treatment of disease by the latest and most scientific means of structural adjustment by manipulation and correct hand massage.

It affects directly, the nervous, Vascular, Glandular and Muscular systems. It relieves nerve pressure by adjusting luxations or sub-luxations that might exist in or along the spinal column from whence the greater number of nerves emanate, and are likewise subject to undue pressure caused from slight injury or congestion along the spinal vertebrae.

It increases the circulation, therefore it strengthens and frees the heart action. It beautifies the entire body for a perfect circulation is the very dynamo which drives the machinery of the physically perfect human being.

Mechano Therapy is applied in many ways and to all ailments which are caused by injury or lack of proper nerve stimulation or blood supply. So remember that, where there is perfect circulation there can be no disease.

With Mechano Therapy are used Thermo Therapy and Vibro Therapy which are applied when necessary to hasten the circulation or assist in nerve stimulation, thus by these combined methods quick relief is accomplished, and people who are looking for their money's worth and a little more, are sure of getting it.

There is no other office of this kind in the state as well equipped for the thorough application of Mechano Therapy as is now located in Janesville, and people who may be planning a trip to the Hot Springs, had better investigate. RACINE POLO TEAM WINS IN FAST GAME Exciting Contest Staged at Rink Last Evening Goes to Visitors by Two to One Score.

Racine defeated the Moose Roller Polo team at the Auditorium last night by the score of two to one. Janesville put up the best game possible but were pitted against professional players who were old and experienced at the game. The real reason of the local defeat is spelled in the name of "Fritz" Reichert, who is the best polo player ever seen on the local floor. He was the life of the Racine team for when he hit the ball with his 250 pounds of bone and muscle and a ton of enthusiasm it went like a bullet and made a clear path for its passage. The playing of both teams was faultless, Racine advancing the ball down the floor by fine team work and perfect passing then to try to shoot the ball by hard hitting past Gaffey and Langdon. But the first rush for the visitors, was a whirlwind on the skates for once he started on an open field the locals could not catch him.

The only thing that marred the game was Racine's holding for they were experienced in this style of playing and used it to good advantage in the scrimmages. The game was intensely exciting and the spectators were often on their feet applauding spectacular playing. Captain Kilmer played his usual brilliant game but could not penetrate Racine's defense for a goal. Schaffer and Gaffey played steady games and stopped many of their opponent's rushes. Blunk who substituted for Blakely made the goal for Janesville and also showed that he was able to hold his own in the rough playing.

First Third—Both teams played equally well and it was easily to predict that neither side would score in this third. The ball zigzagged up and down the floor. "Fritz" showed that in spite of his size he could get over the floor at a rapid rate. He put steam into his shots and tried to score from any angle or distance. Langdon made numerous pretty stops in this period and no one envied him of his job of stopping the wild darts of the Belle City team. Janesville played their rivals even and had opportunities to score but the blocking of Korzilus and Kellogg spoiled all efforts.

Second half—The period proved the defeat of Janesville for Racine made both of her goals at this time. Blunk was placed in Blakely's place. Racine's first score was the result of a lightning dash down the floor by Bullette who unaided advanced the length of the floor and scored on a nangle shot. Racine came back strong and their next score was a mixture of luck and good playing. The invincible "Fritz" played the ball down the floor by his clever dodging and tried one of his "haymaking" swings at the ball, Langdon stopped the ball which Give these Havana newspapers credit for being right up to date. Two Havana reporters will cover the Washington club's spring training at Charlottesville, Va., to tell the fans in Cuba how Jacinto and Acosta, Cuban players, are getting on. bounded off over to Bullette who shot the ball into an unprotected spot before the players and spectators had realized what had happened. Last Third—Janesville came back strong and played the Racine team even throughout the period. Blunk scored Janesville's lone goal after Kilmer had advanced the ball past the outer guard "Fritz," and the goal was scored on a fast passing play. Encouraged by their score Janesville made a stronger bid to tie the game. Coming down the floor in whirlwind plays they battled desperately to score. The game for his team stopping the drives of Kilmer and Blunk. Time was called amid Janesville effort to score.

This defeat puts Racine in the lead and Janesville's percentage is 500. The Moose team plays a return game at Racine tonight where they hope to turn the tables. It is probable that they will not meet the same team as last night and have an even chance of winning. Langdon will not accompany the team to Racine because of the basketball game tonight. Worthington replacing him.

Summary.
Janesville:—Kilmer, 1 rush; Blakely and Blunk 2 rush; Schaffer, center; Gaffey, half back; Langdon, goal.
Racine:—Bullette, 1 rush; Tiedy, 2 rush; "Fritz" Reichert, center; Korzilus, half back; Kellogg, goal.
Goals:—Blunk, 1; Bullette 2.
Thirds—10, 10, 15.

PILE UP BIG SCORE AGAINST JEFFERSON

Local High School Team Has Too Easy a Game Last Night, Winning by 59 to 9 Score.

(By Scoop.)

The Janesville high school basketball five has taken another step toward the Appleton tournament. Last night at Jefferson they outclassed their opponents so far, that the game was very uninteresting to the many spectators who thronged the gymnasium. Not until the second half did Jefferson get their bearings, because of the surprise handed them by the locals. The neighboring city five was forced to a 25 to 0 score in the first half, and the final score was 59 to 9.

At no time were the locals in danger. They began their spurt at a very start, and kept the pace throughout the game. The gymnasium floor was rather small, but the locals learned how to work in cramped quarters by holding a short practice in the afternoon.

Jefferson had a fairly heavy team, but they lacked experience and principally team-work. The locals were superior in team-work. By short passing the locals worked the ball down the floor with great rapidity, making the shot at the basket almost sure.

A preliminary game between the freshmen and sophomore teams was of considerable interest to the crowd, and resulted in a victory for the former, 14 to 10.

The Janesville-Jefferson game started with a rush. After about two minutes of poor basketball, the locals took a spurt and Atwood counted the first goal, although covered by two men. From this time on, the locals had it their own way. Dalton was next with a long shot. Atwood at once added another. Hemming then started to score with two fairly long shots, in succession. Atwood added another. Here Jefferson had their first chance to score, when the locals fouled, but they failed to make it. Atwood then secured another only to be followed with a free throw and a basket by Hemming. Atwood and Dalton then counted one each, after which Jefferson failed to score on a free throw. Hemming missed two free throws in succession. Atwood and Dalton closed the half by each adding a basket to the score. The half ended with the score standing, Janesville, 25; Jefferson, 0. Jefferson had no chance for a field basket, this half, due to the close guarding by the locals.

The second half was a repetition of the first. It was Atwood who scored most of the points in the first half. He failed to work as hard in the second half, although his floor work was good. Hemming led in the second half with the number of baskets. Falter succeeded in evening up with his man, who, after being shifted to forward from center, secured three very lucky baskets. He secured all the points for his team.

The second half was not as rough as the first, even for the fact that the locals scored more. Atwood again started the scoring. Hemming missed a free throw. He added a basket shortly after. Edler, after playing a close guarding game, went up the floor on a pass and secured his first basket. Here Copeland was substituted for Hager at center, Hager going to left forward. Hager received the ball on the tipoff and shot from the middle of the floor, the basket being a clean but lucky one. Atwood and Hemming each added another basket, the score by two baskets in succession. After about fifteen minutes of play in the second half, time was taken out to allow the local subs to enter the game, and they all showed up to advantage. The game ended with the locals at the top of the score, 59 to 9.

The line-up and score:
Janesville—Atwood and L. Stewart, 17; Dalton and Ryan, 11; Hemming, 9; Edler, 15; Capt. Falter and Kuhlrow, 15.

Jefferson—Daberiner and Hager, 17; H. Beck and F. Beck, 17; Hager and Copeland, 15; Seifert, 15; Hamann, 15. Baskets—Hemming (10), Atwood (8), Dalton (6), Falter (3), Hager (3), Edler (2).

Free Throws—Hemming (1), Hager (3).
Time of game, 15 and 20 minutes halves.
Referee—Williams, Ft. Atkinson.

NOTES OF THE GAME.
Hemming played a star game at center, his floor work being a marked improvement over the preceding games.

Edler failed to secure his usual number of baskets but played a great guarding game.

Hager, Capt. Falter's man, was really lucky. The shots he made were almost impossible, all of them being from a long range.

Atwood kept his pace throughout the game and was not only fast at floor work but secured eight baskets.

Dalton at forward secured six baskets and played the floor most of the time. He was always on the job, and stopped many an opponent's attempt to score.

The subs—Kuhlrow, Stewart and Ryan—played a worthy game. They only played about three minutes, but showed speed and good judgment. The Jefferson team were fairly fast at times, but the game was too easy for Janesville.

Stoughton defeated Fort Atkinson last night at the latter's floor, the score being 27 to 21. The locals play the Fort here on Friday night of next week.

The Beloit high school basketball team defeated the Lake Mills high school team at Beloit last night by the score of 33 to 17. The game was a good one, the first half ending in a tie, the score being 12 to 11. Roger Cunningham of this city acted as referee.

"THE GIRL AT THE GATE."
The "Girl at the Gate," the merry Panama-San Francisco musical comedy which has been a resident of the La Salle Opera House, Chicago, for the past six months, will be the attraction at the Myers Theatre, Thursday, Feb. 20. "The Girl at the Gate" was written by Will M. Hough, Frederick Donaghy and Ben M. Jerome, and the company that Mr. Harry Askin, the managing director of the La Salle Opera House, is sending to this city, is the original one, and includes Herbert Corbell, Lucy Veston, Cathryn Rowe Palmer, Will Phillips, Morimer Weiden, Forrest W. Plann, Gretchen Eastman and Charles Huntington. The celebrated La Salle singing and dancing chorus is being sent on tour for the first time. The story of "The Girl at the Gate" concerns mainly the love of Normal Beane for a girl who believes him the culprit in a West Point scandal, whereas he simply shoulders the blame to save her pride, her brother being the real offender. Her father becomes the head of the Panama canal commission and has the son appointed as commander of Engineers at the Panama Bay end of the fortifications. The brother falls in the coils of a pretty Japanese girl whom he believes to be the employee of a bazaar, but who is in reality a member of the Japanese secret service, and she gets from him the plans of the fortifications. Beane suspects the trick that has been played, and again protects the girl's pride by saving her brother's reputation. He is successful and the brother tells the truth. The search for the plans is complicated by the grafting propensities of the canal commission's chief deputy, who unwittingly acts as Japan's agent in the sale of an island of advantage to Japan as a coaling station in the Pacific. Herbert Corbell will play the grafting deputy. Ivy Troutman will be the proud heiress, Lucy Weston will be a sagacious English widow, Forrest Whinnit will be the down-and-out hero, and Will Phillips will play a wealthy trouble hunter.

RAINEY FILMS.
Those who attend the exhibition of the pictures secured by Paul J. Rainey on his expedition to British East Africa, which will be shown at the Myers Theatre on Feb. 24-25, matinee daily, must regret the loss of over nine thousand feet of film owing to the London dock strike, but fortunately, two of the most thrilling and unusual of the films were saved, affording the opportunity to follow the chase of hunting leopard, and to ride full cry after a great lioness. Mr. Rainey took with him about fifty dogs on this expedition. Hunters who had grown old in jungle lore, scoffed at the idea that they could run to earth the wild beasts, and predicted that few of the dogs would be alive at the end of the trip. That they little knew the intelligence and stamina of the American dog is shown by the fact that only two of the animals were killed while on the hunt.

How Can the People Decide Which Medicine is Best?

S. B. HARTMAN, M. D.
Columbus, Ohio.

One of my readers writes me in part as follows. He says: "I like your idea as expressed in your last article as to how we may become sure we are right in matters of religion and medicine. Experience is our only guide. Now, as to the best way of getting this experience, you did not give any definite instruction. Take my case for instance. I am a man of family. And while we try to live properly, yet we are subject to disease and derangements like other people. Occasionally we have to use drugs. What would you advise?"

My reply in part, was as follows: Let us suppose it was a cough, or a pain in the chest, or a twinge of rheumatism, or a stoppage of the nose and discharge from the throat, indicating catarrh.

What you are after is, first, to cure yourself of your trouble; and, second, to gain experience so that you may cure yourself next time, if you or any member of your family should be so afflicted.

If you go to the drug store you buy Peruna. If it cures you then you know what to get next time. If it does not cure you and it proves to be worthless, you know what to avoid.

In taking advertised medicines that have a definite name you are gradually learning to distinguish between those remedies that help and those that do not.

If a neighbor in whom I have confidence should tell me that they have purchased a bottle of some advertised medicine that helped them, I should feel perfectly free to give the medicine a trial. And if I found that the advertised medicine cured me I should not hesitate to tell my neighbor about it. I should not hesitate to have my name published either, as testifying to the merits of such a medicine. Nothing short of this would be justice. Nothing less than this would be honest.

The prejudice against advertised medicines may have had some foundation in the past. But up to date I can conscientiously say that there are just as good medicines in the drug store, compounded in a manufactory, advertised for sale to the people, just as good medicines of this kind as the medicines that the doctors prescribe.

All our best remedies have been first found by common experience. The testimony of one person and another has spread the news and finally its use has become general.

This is exactly the way Peruna has spread among the people. It has not been advertising that has sold Peruna. Sometimes advertising sells the first bottle to a person, but afterwards it must be the merits of Peruna that sell it.

One person takes Peruna and is cured of a cough, or cold, or catarrh, lung disease, or kidney disease, or stomach disease. Some one of these derangements which perhaps the doctors have failed to cure, Peruna cures. He tells his neighbor about it. His neighbor tries it, for the same purpose and is cured also. He again tells it, and so the news is spread.

Yes, I mean to put myself on record as saying it is from the experience of the common people that we must expect to sift out the genuine remedies from the many spurious ones claiming attention. As a doctor myself, who has spent many years in the study and practice of medicine, I say and shall say again many times that Peruna is the best remedy I know of to meet the common every-day climatic ailments to which the household is subject. And if I were keeping house as you are, trying to keep free from debt and disease, I should certainly keep a bottle of Peruna in the house all the time. No. 53. Advertisement.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Any old time is Springtime, if you're willin' to help it along.

Any old day is a holiday, if you'll furnish the laughter an' song.

The birds can't be singin' always an'
the blossoms can't bloom without rest.

But there's hope an' there's light an'
the sky seems bright fur the feller that's doin' his best.

Any old time is Winter, if you're willin' to see it that way.

The frost in the heart is the frost that chills till the world is dull an'
gray.

You may shiver by day an' be shiv-erin' still as you turn to a restless couch.

Fur the days go slow through the ice
an' the snow fur the feller that's nursin' a grouch.

—Washington Star.

An Irishman, wearing a smile that "never came off," and noted for good fellowship, always met his friends with a cheery "Good morning; fine day ain't it?" regardless of whether it was raining pitchforks, or snowing to beat the cars, the salutation was always the same.

It came to be a standing joke,
among his friends, that all days were alike to Pat, and yet his homely philosophy, if not more than skin deep,
was an inspiration, for all days are fine days to the mind which in any measure appreciates the joy of living.

People who spend a winter in California frequently speak of the monotony of perpetual sunshine, and are usually glad to get back to a more rugged climate, and while the "Sun-kist" oranges may revel in the sunlight, the northern winter, with its bracing atmosphere and carpet of snow, is more acceptable to the unaccustomed.

One of the principal reasons why so many northern suckers invest in alligator farms in Florida, is because the tourist never visits the south except in the winter months when the country is at its best.

He leaves the north in a blizzard,
and wakes up the second morning in a land of bright green foliage, where the air is fragrant with orange blossoms and the song of the mocking bird fills the atmosphere with melody.
Not much of an argument is necessary to convince him that this is paradise, and a smooth promoter finds no difficulty in separating him from his money.

If he would spend a summer in the state, where it rains the most of the time from the middle of May until the first of November, he would lose all desire to possess the land, and he would also understand why the natives lack ambition to become producers.

The Chicago man, who laid out a town site on a dry lake bed, was asked if he had ever seen the land in the summer time, and said, "No." When told that it would be two feet under water in July, he said he didn't care for he would have all the lots sold before that time, and he did.

But the rains of Florida, like the sunshine of California, are necessary to the fertile lands of the state. The trouble is that this class of land represents but a fragment of the territory,
and it all looks alike in the winter.

Nature is very resourceful, and the laws which govern, in this silent realm, are always an interesting study. The forces which control are never in a hurry, and the importance of rest and a holiday, is never overlooked.

The trees of the forest, so rich in foliage during the long summer months, fulfill their mission, and when the frost paints the landscape with golden hue, the life-giving current changes its course, and the roots and tendrils, which have been working over-time, take in the nourishment and while they recuperate for another campaign, the barren forest weathers the storms of winter, and gathers strength for another mantle of green.

During the same dreary winter
months the gray soil, so uninviting,
is out on a holiday, and after a season of rest is ready to respond to the first gentle touch of spring.

Down in the orange district of Florida, it is no uncommon sight to notice fragrant blossoms and golden fruit on the tree, at the same time. While the November crop is being gathered the ambitious tree is blooming for the June crop, which is never much of a success.

The silent forces, beneath the soil,
rebel, and refuse to perform double work, and while they are sometimes spurred to action by the hand of man
in supplying an abundance of fertilizer, results are always disastrous,
and the overworked tree soon dies,
and gives up the struggle.

It is sometimes helpful to remember that the short, cold days, and long,
dreary nights of winter, is nature's rest period, as necessary to the harvest as the summer shower and sunshine.

There are a few good people in the world who profess sanctification.
They have come to believe that they live in an atmosphere which is free from temptation, and therefore they are free from sin.

It is a peculiar belief, and people
who entertain it are usually abnormal, because the tendency is toward the notion that perfection places them on a pedestal, and this inspires egotism,
which often results in censorship.
The man who imagines that he is better than the common herd, usually trots in a class by himself.

Hot-house plants are protected from the wind and storm, and while good to look at, on dress parade, they lack the elements of hardihood, and are never very sturdy. Strength develops through resistance, and this is as true in the realm of moral character as in the domain of nature.

The tree which stands the storm
the best is the tree that stands out in the open and defies the elements.
While it has been taking on strength and fibre, the roots, which hold it steady, have been tested and are ready for any emergency.

If the good Lord, Who created us and equipped us for the journey, had intended us to be hot-house plants,
He would have environed us in a land
free from temptation, but He didn't.
Instead, He added to the equipment,
the power of resistance and then made us free moral agents, and left us to do as we please.

It is a compliment due humanity
to say that the rank and file, will resist, and so honesty and sobriety, virtue and morality, are the rule, and not the exception.

While church creeds may be more lightly regarded, than in the days of the forefathers, the broader creed of a common brotherhood has taken root and the golden rule is a liberally accepted theology.

People are more concerned about
the present than the future life today,
and this concern leads them to take an interest in their fellow men, and so there is being woven into the fabric of every-day history, the golden threads of love and sacrifice.

The spirit of the Master is abroad in the land, in generous measure, and all days are choice days to the great army of willing workers.

dents of Constantinople, including Mrs. W. W. Rockhill, the wife of the American ambassador; Lady Low-ther, wife of the British ambassador;
Hoffman Philip, secretary of the American embassy; C. F. Gates, president of Robert College; Mary Hills Patrick, president of the American College for Girls and Major Clyde S. Ford, U. S. A., are interesting themselves in the cases of Miss Alt and Miss Schneider, two old ladies, residents of San Stefano, who not only did such valorous duty at the cholera camp before help came from the outside, but who continued at their self-imposed tasks until the former became ill of the disease and the latter was compelled to stop on account of absolute exhaustion.

A party of Americans the latter part of November came to San Stefano in an automobile. They found the gay little seaside resort sadly transformed. The population had mostly fled to the city, and the streets, the open squares, the door-yards and the now famous Greek school were filled with terrible cholera-stricken figures, the dead lying unburied as they fell in hundreds,
the dying moaning for help, these able still to move about trying vainly to draw water from the wells to assuage their burning thirst.

San Stefano had become a cholera
camp, and there the stricken men from the army, fighting desperately at Tchatalja, were sent by trainloads, but in the strain and stress of the days of battle when all eyes were turned toward the front and the terrible danger from cholera had not yet been realized, the camp was still unorganized, and no help was ready for the miserable suffering hundreds
the most spectacular and wreckless left there by the war side.

Only two women, Miss Alt and her friend, Mrs. Schneider, residents of San Stefano, had stuck to their posts,
and devoting all of their small savings to the task, were making soup and feeding and caring as best they could for the soldiers stricken down with this terrible disease. These women, both nearly seventy, had been working there alone, quietly, careless of self, for several days
when the little party in the automobile discovered them at their wonderful labor; and for many weeks
more, even after a sort of "field cholera hospital" was started at the Greek school and others were there to bear the burden, they continued their noble work, shunning recognition, wishing no thanks, working for suffering humanity in its most repel-lant form.

Miss Alt is now recovering from an attack of cholera; both ladies are much broken in health by their terrible days at San Stefano, cholera
camp, and both are in very straitened circumstances. Their friends in this city are endeavoring to make them some recompense for their self-sacrifice, and Mrs. Rockhill has enlisted friends in America to aid in the recognition of these heroic women.

George Clarke, a celebrated negro minstrel, on one occasion, when being examined as a witness, was severely interrogated by a lawyer.
"You are in the minstrel business,
I believe?" inquired the lawyer.
"Yes, sir," was the reply. "Is not that rather a low calling?" "I don't know but what is, sir," replied the minstrel, "but it is so much better than my father's that I am rather proud of it." The lawyer fell into the trap. "What was your father's calling?" he inquired. "He was a lawyer," replied Clarke, in a tone that sent the whole court into a roar of laughter
as the discomfited lawyer sat down.

MAYOR FATHERS LOOKS UP INCOME TAX PAYMENTS

Made Business Trip to Chicago Yesterday—Also Visited Auto Truck Exhibition.

Mayor Fathers made a trip to Chicago yesterday for the purpose of securing information regarding corporations with offices out of the state who are assessed with an income tax in this city. The payments of which are now due. As the State Tax Commission gives the city no more information concerning these corporations other than their names and the sum assessed them as income tax, the problem of collections is a very difficult one. One of the corporations assessed with an income tax in this city is the Hurlock Land Company, a Missouri corporation with offices in Chicago. The Chicago company was visited by the mayor yesterday.

Mayor Fathers also paid a visit to the motor truck show which he reported showed great development and application to a wider field of industry. No companies manufacturing fire apparatus exclusively had exhibits but a number of companies that build combination chemical and hose wagons as a sideline were represented. The mayor informed representatives of several exhibiting companies that the city of Janesville had purchased a Seagrave fire truck and was assured by all that no mistake had been made.

HEART AND HOME

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I am a girl of 21 and have the habit of being proud. Do you think a girl can be proud and at the same time have a sweet disposition and be liked by her friends? (2)—I am going with a contingent of 27. We get along well together. Do you think he is too old for me? FLORENCE.

(1)—If you are proud of the right kind of things, you may also be very sweet and lovable. (2)—No.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I'm a girl of 20. I went with a fellow three years. Just lately he has turned me down and is going with another girl. I'm quite sure he doesn't care as much for the other as he did for me. What should I do to win him back? He is one year younger than I. Would that make any difference in marriage? BROKEN HEARTED.

My dear I wish you had some of the pride that I hope is possessed by "Florence" who writes the letter appearing above yours. If you had you would not call yourself broken hearted over the vacillating calf-love of a boy who isn't yet of legal age to marry. Let him go and manage to fall in love with a real man.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How can I fill out my sunken cheeks and take away the dark spots in the corners of my eyes next to my nose? A. B. C.

I should judge that what you need is "fattening up" unless you are ill. Have you asked a doctor about your condition? Eat nourishing foods, drink lots of milk and pure water, exercise outdoors—not violently, but enough to feel a comfortable glow all over you and to breathe deep. Sleep with your windows open and plenty of warm covers. Massage your face with a good skin food, or good rich milk.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—Is it good form to assist a gentleman in putting on his overcoat? (2)—Are you supposed to hold his hat while attending a theatre? BLANCHE.

(1)—Not if he is strong enough to put it on alone. (2)—Goodness, no!

THE CHIEF'S AUTO.

To the Editor: Chief of Police Appleby has asked the council to purchase him an automobile for use in his department. The next thing he will want is a chauffeur. He intimates that with an automobile he could more easily apprehend the automobiles that violate the law by exceeding the speed limit and that in a few months the cost of the machine would be paid for by the fines imposed. This is a direct threat at the automobile owners and shows small consideration for them. They are to be hauled into court to pay for the Chief's auto are they? Well, if the Chief really wants to stop auto speeding all he has to do is to watch the machines that are doing it, rake their number—there is one in front and behind each machine—and haul them into court. He does not need an auto to do this. One good man on a motorcycle could do twice as much as the Chief in an auto. If the Chief really wants to clean up Janesville let him spend part of his time investigating the alleys and haunts of criminals instead of riding up and down the streets in an auto at the expense of the taxpayers looking for auto owners. Criminals are not loitering on street corners waiting for the police to come and give them an automobile ride to the station. AUTOMOBILIST.

TRAINING SCHOOL NOTES.

Mrs. Day gave the school a very fine Lincoln reading, Wednesday afternoon, which was greatly appreciated by the whole student body. The ideals of rhetorical expression as illustrated in Mrs. Day's finished delivery, were of much value to the young teachers. It is felt that this kind of work is worthy of much more time and attention than it is receiving in most schools. This school is doing more in the way of rehearsal than heretofore.

The school has recently acquired another educational exhibit from Morris & Co., meat packers of Chicago.

Marion Williams has the misfortune to have the whooping-cough and will not be able to attend school until after the spring vacation. One of the students has had the mumps.

Miss Jacobson and Principal Lowth are attending the meeting of the S. W. T. A. at Madison. Mr. Lowth read a paper Friday afternoon on "Special Training for Rural School Teachers."

Alice Smith, Helen Gray, Alice Cullen and Minnie Milbrant took charge of the principal's classes during his absence.

There are now three periods for general exercises during the week, and the principal is improving the opportunity to read to the school.

A fine colored Rhine print is the contribution of the class of 1912 to the school. This is an appreciated addition to our scheme of decoration. The students have voted to have a school pin hereafter instead of a class pin, and each succeeding class will simply have the date engraved upon the pin.

The Rock County Teachers' association meets in Beloit this year about the middle of March. Principal Lowth will speak upon the subject of "Teaching Civics in the Rural School."

Miss Anderson, the city visiting nurse, was at the training school a short time Wednesday afternoon.

A large quantity of seeds has been received from the government and the school gardens will be planted again in the spring.

REFUTES STATEMENT REGARDING PROMISE

City Clerk Did Not Promise to Consider Submission of Affidavits Sufficient Amendment.

Although admitting their error in asserting that City Attorney Dougherty promised to accept as sufficient amendment to the rejected recall petitions, affidavits from those whose signatures had been pronounced to be of men not qualified voters, backers of the recall made the statement in a morning paper to-day that City Clerk Hammarlund had made such a promise and that "as the interview between the City Clerk and the recall committee at which this statement was made, was carefully reported by a court reporter there can be no further details." City Clerk Hammarlund does not hesitate to deny that he made the sweeping statement ascribed to him, and stated this morning that the only promise given the recall committee was that he would accept affidavits as evidence tending to prove that the signers rejected as disqualified were legally qualified. He at no time promised to waive the other, and no less serious, objections made to the recall petitions. As one of the attorneys for the recall committee had stated, "Those questions were for the lawyers to settle."

MET IN BEHRING SEA

Was Second to Confront Him on Achievement—Other Gossip Heard in the Cream City. (By Ellis B. Usher.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 15.—The visit of Roald Amundsen, the discoverer of the South Pole, to Wisconsin, the past week, got tragic interest from the immediate report of the loss of the leader of the British South Polar Expedition, Captain Scott, and four of his party. Captain Amundsen has had much confidence, but it must be gratifying to him to find that Captain Scott's party verified his claims to the first discovery. It would be pleasant to feel that the American claim to North Pole discovery were as well authenticated. Amundsen had a splendid reception here last Saturday, at the hands of his countrymen, in which everybody cordially cooperated. One local feature could not be duplicated everywhere. Capt. John G. Barry of the revenue cutter Tuscarora, was in command of Grant, in Behring's Sea, when Amundsen came out at Point Barrow, and was the second man to take the Norseman's hand and congratulate him on that occasion. And another Arctic traveler to greet him here was Major Hersey, the local weather forecaster, who, with Walter Walcott, of Spitzbergen, when he tried his balloon experiment. Major Hersey got his military title as one of the majors of the Rough Riders, under Roosevelt. These gentlemen were able to meet Mr. Amundsen on his own ground, and give special interest to his visit to Milwaukee, where a statue of Lief Erickson, shares the Lake Front with Solomon Juneau, which, by the way, was a fine good story, that so far as I know has never been in print. A Wisconsin man dining not long ago, with some of the intellectual elite of Cambridge, Mass., was entertained by overhearing a lady who had just been visiting in Milwaukee. In the course of her running comment, she said: "But the funniest thing I saw there was a statue of a large, fat, round figure representing June as a man in pioneer buckskin costume, with a rifle. Strange, was it not? It must be an Indian conception of June."

Time to Try Out Recall. This would be the time to have the recall of judicial decision of judges, and of state officers, in force in Wisconsin. The whole program would get an admirable "try out," in the Ekern case. Petitions and counter petitions would be easy to obtain to keep everybody's attention on the Ekern, to the supreme court and the governor, reeling. Anybody with time to figure it out can see how McGovern's friends could go after the senators with petitions for their recall, and how Ekern's friends could go after Judge Stevens' decision, if not his scalp, and so on, ad infinitum, to the last day. That is just the sort of a mixup they are getting, out in Oregon, every once in a while. It would greatly help to illuminate the possibilities of the recall, if we had it in force now. The judicial spirit of both sides would insure its effective use.

Big Money in Small Business. It was apparent that my suggestion of last week that big money is turning to small business, was new to a good many people. It is not. It has been going on for centuries. It is a natural thing for people who have savings to invest to keep away from things that are before the commissions and the courts all the time, mainly because their size and public character makes them easy marks. You do it yourself. You put your money in the savings bank, or into life insurance, or bonds, or stocks, or bonds, because there are so many vexatious questions that you don't understand, about stocks and bonds, these days. But the savings bank, or trust company, or bank of deposit, or insurance company, must invest your money and make it earn more than 3% or it could not afford to pay you 3% for leaving it with them. So, in reality, you put the responsibility of handling your money and deciding how to safely invest it. Just now they are declining to invest your money in railroads, because you are poking the railroads. They are making Wisconsin cities pay more interest, because you and their other depositors, are favoring municipal ownership and high taxes. They are investing your own money in things like the low cost stores, department stores, dairy lunches, and other small businesses, because you are in that same line, and taxation which, if you will stand, they can. But they will not be put in a different class from you, and taxed differently. This may be a crude illustration but it ought to convey the information to any intelligent man, that he will never be safe from the effects of his own acts as a citizen. The bigger the concern the easier it will be to shift the tax burden, and if the little fellow wants to invite competition in his own business, he only needs to make other business unprofitable.

Recent Bank Statements. Speaking in the line of big things the recent Milwaukee bank statements show total banking resources in this city, of $11,545,683. In 1880 the total banking resources of this city were $10,575,410, less than half the assets of one bank and about two thirds the assets of another today. Then Alex Mitchell's bank, the great bank of the northwest of Chicago, was about the size of the largest bank in La Crosse today. So when we hear that the banking business of the United States has increased 111% in twelve years, we don't have to go away from home to prove it. A lot of the loose talk we hear, has no perspective. If people would be searching in their own affairs, as those of other people, they would learn more and "yap" less. I have no brief to lecture on this subject. I am tempted to talk on this and kindred topics largely because so little seems to be said on this side. It opens the widest opportunity of the day for really original investigation, without competition. Advertisement for Erie. The eastern financial reports for the six months ending Dec. 31, make a showing for the Erie railroad that backs up what its officials claim for it. Even under the handicap of having work trains thick on the west end, the revenues from freight and passengers increased $2,442,140, and the operating expenses increased less than $2,000,000, leaving a nice balance "to the good," under some difficulties. The coming year promises to show a boost for Erie business, for the efficiency that characterizes its operations will come up when its "water level" line is in full working order.

Short Notes. If one income tax is good two ought to be an infinite joy. I noticed that Quincy, Mass., this week, awarded a temporary loan at 3.61%. Wisconsin cities pay 6 to 7 per cent, on such paper. Medford, Mass., got money temporarily at 4%, and Fitchburg is offering 4% bonds. That is high, but 4% is the lowest Wisconsin figure now, and it will go to 5% if municipal ownership schemes increase. The Davidson had a strong well-acted play, "The Attack," on the boards this week, and next week Henrietta Crossman will be among the attractions in "The Real Thing," which is said to bubble with fun. She is always good. She opens Thursday for three nights and a matinee. A recent copy of the Seattle Post Intelligencer says that Port Townsend has granted a fifty year franchise for an electric railway, to William B. Webb, Mr. Webb is a Wisconsin man, born in La Crosse. His franchise requires that he must have two miles of road running within eighteen months.

DUNCES IN SCHOOL NOT DULL OUTSIDE

Prof. M. V. O'Shea Says Apparently Stupid Child May Be As Bright As Other Children.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 15.—When is a dunce not a dunce? This question was effectively answered here this morning by Prof. M. V. O'Shea of the University of Wisconsin, in a lecture on "Everyday Traits of Human Nature," before the College Endowment association. Every person in the world differs from every other person in body, mind and character, said Dr. O'Shea, but because there are certain dominant traits common to large groups of people, it is usual to separate persons into classes. The child who happens to belong to the class of human beings who find it difficult to get along rapidly in school, emerges slowly, and is often considered a dunce by his parents and teachers. In reality, he may be just as bright as other children, only the average school is organized along lines that offer little chance for his particular kind of ability.

Two brothers of radically different mental makeup, with whose life histories Dr. O'Shea was familiar, were described by the speaker to illustrate his point. "As pupils in the schools they were entirely different," he said. "The older was regarded as a dunce. He failed in most of the work, and at last, when one of the school boys, a business man in Rochester, N. Y., respected by everyone for his ability and character, although he cannot spell or write with any degree of success. But he manages a good many people who work for him, and have the special sorts of ability which he lacks. As a boy he was held up to ridicule by his teachers, but he was always a leader on the playground. He loved to do anything that required the use of his hands and he was a wonderful worker. Today he is a leading business man in Rochester, N. Y., and has extraordinary physical endurance when engaged in muscular work, but could not apply himself to school studies without fatigue and restlessness."

"The younger brother excelled in all the work of the school, outstripped his older brother and was held up as a model by the teachers. He never learned any trade, is not good with tools, was never a leader among his playfellows, and has never manifested any ability in executive work. These two types are found everywhere," continued Dr. O'Shea. "The dunce in school work of the bookish kind may be superior in every form of executive activity. The brilliant fellow in book work may be utterly deficient in practical executive activities. This last type is much favored in schools. The other type usually has a hard time, though it is better now than ten or fifteen years ago when his kind of ability was not recognized at all. The introduction of manual arts into the schools and the teaching of subjects in a dynamic way helps him out. "We ought to do more for this type of boy than we do," said the speaker. "We ought to conserve his native ability and develop him to the highest extent. We ought to let him go through school, even if he cannot do well in grammar or cube root. Some times the other type is urged too far along his special line without getting a balance in practical activities. That various people get different mental impressions and 'turn' in different ways, was an interesting fact brought out by Dr. O'Shea. Most people get their knowledge from images gained by sight. Others get most of their knowledge from the sense of hearing. Occasionally a person is found who relies on the sense of smell. If an 'eye-minded' person is put in school beside an 'ear-minded' one, they will show different abilities in different subjects. The 'eye-minded' boy might learn to speak a foreign language very slowly, while the other boy would progress rapidly in that particular subject."

PLAN FOR INAUGURAL IS NOW COMPLETED

Tremendous Amount of Work to Arrange All Details of the Big Democratic Event.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 15.—The arrangements for the inauguration ceremonies and parade, involving a tremendous amount of detail work, are practically completed, although two weeks and four days will have to pass before President-elect Woodrow Wilson and Vice President-elect Thomas R. Marshall will be introduced into their respective offices and will take their oaths of office. The grandstands at the White House and at several points along Pennsylvania avenue are completed and so is the staging for the inauguration ceremonies at the capitol; the stanchions for the steel cables with which Pennsylvania avenue will be roped off on the day of the parade are in place and the thousands of electric lights to be used for the inaugural illumination have been strung and placed in their proper positions. Every detail of the inauguration ceremony and of the parade following it has been carefully planned and every precaution has been taken to prevent the occurrence of any awkward hitch.

The coming inauguration will be remarkable in several respects. In the first place the southern states will have a stronger representation in the parade than for a great many years; another new departure will be the arrangement by which the vice-president will receive more attention than ever before, a military escort being provided for him to accompany him to the capitol and back to the White House; another equally new precedent will be established by the omission of the inauguration ball which in former years used to constitute the most brilliant feature of the inauguration programs.

In accordance with the plans arranged by the committee in charge of the inauguration ceremonies, President Taft, President-elect Wilson and Vice President-elect Marshall on the morning of March 4, will be escorted from the White House to the capitol with military honors. The procession will be headed by Gen. Wood as grand marshal and his staff, followed by the Essex troop of New Jersey, forming the special escort of Governor Wilson; then will come the carriage containing President Taft and Governor Wilson, next the troop of Cavalry cadets forming the escort of Governor Marshall, who will occupy the second carriage, which will be followed by the entire grand veteran division, composed of members of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Union Veterans Legion and the Spanish War Veterans.

The president, the president-elect and the vice-president-elect will enter the senate wing of the capitol by the bronze door. The president and the president-elect will be escorted to the president's room where they shall remain until escorted to the senate chamber, to be present at the inauguration of the vice-president-elect, to whom the oath of office is to be administered by the president-pro-tempore of the senate immediately before the adjournment of that body. Having taken his oath, the vice president will call the senate to order and deliver his inaugural address.

The organization of the senate having been completed, a procession will be formed by the officers of the senate and the house of representatives, the justices of the supreme court of the United States, the committee of arrangements, the president and the president-elect, the members of the diplomatic corps in accordance with their ranks, the vice-president, members of the senate and the house of representatives, heads of executive departments, governors of states and territories, the admiral of the navy and his aides, the chief of staff of the army and his aides and such officers of the army and navy who have received the thanks of congress. The procession will move through the rotunda to the platform over the main portico, where the inauguration ceremony will take place.

After all are assembled, the chief justice of the supreme court will administer the oath of office to the president-elect who will then deliver his inaugural address. This will conclude the ceremonies at the capitol and the president and vice-president, accompanied by their military escorts, will return to the white house, where they will occupy seats upon the reviewing stand to review the inauguration parade. The parade, in which it is expected more than thirty thousand persons will take part, including regulars from Fort McPherson, Ga., a regiment of coast artillery, the corps of cadets from West Point, the midshipmen from Annapolis, two companies of bluejackets, militia organizations from various states, and civic organizations from practically every state in the union. The parade will be divided into eight divisions, each commanded by an army officer. It will be formed in the streets near the capitol and will march down Pennsylvania avenue to the White House, where it will pass in review before the president and vice-president and the other distinguished officials and dignitaries occupying the grandstand in the "Court of Honor."

At the Coliseum Automobile Show Do Not Fail to See the Aristocratic Premier Little Six

THE BEST makers, as you know, are now featuring Little Sixes. Cylinders of small bore, rationally long stroke, silent, smooth and flexible as well-balanced sixes are, add the final touch which has been necessary to make the motor car the ideal vehicle.

The interest in the New York Show was centered around six-cylinder cars, starters, electric lights and left-hand drives, clearly indicating that the public has decided that these are the dominant features which must characterize high-class cars.

THE PREMIER IS ONE OF THE FIVE GREAT SIXES. Its price this year is the lowest of these five, and the car is a study of fine engineering and up-to-date motor car building, very refined in detail and luxurious in its appointments.

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By
D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted)
In giving you descriptions of the men who became famous in the circus business years ago, there was one who in his line of work was known as top-notch, whom I had almost forgotten, and while he never was an owner of a big show, he was famous for many years in his line of work with the Barnum, the Buffalo Bill and the Burr Robbins shows.

This man was Jason Robbins, and his home was in Brooklyn, New York. In the early seventies while he was still a young man he had something of a reputation as a caterer. Young Robbins conceived the idea of starting what was known with the show as the cook tent, and up to that time all the big shows, except the Adam Forepaugh, had been boarding their people at the different hotels in the towns in which they showed.

Young Robbins visited Mr. Bailey and P. T. Barnum and talked the matter over, and they were not long in making a contract for him to furnish meals for all the working people with the show for so much per meal. He had three tents, the main one of which was known as the cook tent, and the other two as dining rooms.

In those days they did not carry nearly as many people as in later years, but even at that time he served meals three times a day to several hundred people. He stayed with the Barnum show for several years in this capacity and along the first of the eighties after amassing quite a fortune he bought the privileges with the Burr Robbins show and also had the cook tent.

He stayed with the Burr Robbins show for two years, but it was not a money making venture and after losing considerable money he went to the Forepaugh show and a little later went to the Buffalo Bill show. By this time the shows had grown to larger proportions and the last time I saw Mr. Robbins he was serving between 2,100 and 2,200 meals a day. His help consisted of what was known as two twenty-four hour men and their duties were to go ahead of the show four hours and get the wood, meat and vegetables on the lot early in the morning.

The cook tent, wagons, and provisions were always the first to be unloaded in the morning and if the show got in town early, Jason Robbins always had his breakfast ready at 7 o'clock and it was a good omen. These twenty-four hour men would alternate their towns and always stayed back till everything was in readiness before they would leave for the next town.

For several years Robbins carried in all about sixty five men. His price for meals varied all the way from eighteen to twenty five cents, and for many years ran two dining rooms, one that was used as an officers, and managers tent and the other for the working people.

With the Buffalo Bill show he had three dining rooms, one extra for a hundred or more Indians, which were always with the Buffalo Bill show. Whether it was managers or performers, they were always glad to travel with any show that had Jason Robbins for their caterer.

Everybody around the show was fed by tickets, whether it be manager, performer or Indian—no one could enter the cook tent without a ticket. Mrs. Robbins traveled with her husband and was always seen at the entrance of the working men's cook tent taking tickets. After the supper hour was over all the tickets were gathered up and taken to the ticket wagon and Mr. Robbins was paid in full every day.

He usually hired six cooks from forty to fifty waiters, and dish washers, and other helpers made up the number to about sixty-five people.

A different contract was made with the show each season, usually varying some on account of the price of provisions, but I never knew him to receive over twenty five cents a meal.

Jason Robbins amassed two good sized fortunes in this business, the first one of which he lost the greater part of with the Burr Robbins show, mostly on account of the high prices of provisions and only having a quarter of the usual amount of people to care for. But he was never without a job in this line of work for the reason that he excelled in it and anyone of the big shows was always glad to let a contract to Jason Robbins. In what was known as the officer's cook tent you could always go there and get a better meal than you could get at the average hotel.

The last time he was here with the Buffalo Bill show he gave a dinner for a few Janesville friends whom he had known years before, and my wife and myself were among the guests and it was as high class as you could get in a first class restaurant in the city.

For several years before retiring from the business Mr. Robbins began investing his spare money in Brooklyn and New York business property, and a number of years ago retired from business independently rich, and with a name second to none in his line of work.

Mr. Robbins contracted for his meat, wood, vegetables, and everything used in his business many weeks in advance of the show. He bought the best of everything and in this way only was it possible for him to make money although he served on an average of upwards of 2,000 meals a day.

In this line of work Adam Forepaugh was the only show man who ran all the privileges connected with his show himself. He was the first man in the show business to organize and run a cook tent and board his own people, and for many years with the railroad show he ran a dining car on his train where he boarded all the managers and performers, only the working people being boarded on the grounds.

But this did not prove a success in every way for the reason that in bad weather many times the railroad yards would be a mile and a half or two miles from the show grounds where the performers and managers would have to go for their meals and for the last few years that Mr. Forepaugh was in the business he abandoned the dining car and went back to the old style of the officers' cook tent.

This was much more convenient for the people and less expensive for Mr. Forepaugh than dividing them up in two different places. The average person would think it hardly possible for a man in a few years to amass two good sized fortunes in catering to working people with a circus where the prices ran from eighteen cents to twenty five cents a meal and this was only made possible by good management and the amount of meals served every day.

There is still one department of the show that I wish to tell you about and that is what is known as the dressing room. The dressing room is one large round topped tent and divided by canvass partitions into three different departments, one known as the ladies dressing room, the other the gentlemen's, and the third as the horses' dressing room.

In the horses' dressing room long before time for the show to open all the riding horses were brought in there, where trappings were kept and they were all fitted out with their different paraphernalia according to the acts they were to do. In the ladies and gentlemen's dressing rooms each of the performers had their own trunk and the property men whose business it was to unload these trunks and pile them in the dressing room, well knew where they went. Their trunks were opened up and dressing cases such as they were able to carry were put up and each one allowed just so much space in the dressing room.

Of all these the ones most interesting for me to watch get ready for their different acts were the clowns. They had more wardrobes, more pants and shirts and it usually took them three times as long as the average performer to get ready for their acts. And this dressing room to the average outsider would be possibly even more interesting to visit than the big show itself.

I have been requested at different times by friends, who were visiting the show, to be taken back into the dressing rooms where the people were getting ready for their different acts, and when it would come time for the show to commence, I have often heard them say, "I'd rather stay here and watch these people get ready for their acts than to see the show. I have seen many a big show, but this is my first visit to a dressing room."

More than once I have turned them over to some performer in the dressing room to look after and they would spend the entire afternoon or evening there and not even get a glimpse at the show. And more than once I have had them come out to the ticket wagon after the show was all over and say, "That's the best show that I have ever seen."

BRIGADIER GENERAL SMITH PLACED ON THE RETIRED LIST

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 15.—Today, after a career of more than forty-two years of faithful and efficient service as an officer of the United States army, Brig. Gen. George R. Smith of the Quartermaster Corps was placed on the retired list on his own application. Gen. Smith is a native of New York and was graduated from West Point in 1875. For seven years he served with the 12th Infantry. In 1882 he was transferred to the pay department and served continuously with that department up to the time of its merger with the Quartermaster Corps, last November. He was colonel and assistant paymaster general from 1908 until 1912, when he was appointed paymaster general, with the rank of brigadier general, and held that position until the department was abolished, last November, when he was transferred to the Quartermaster Corps with the same rank.

When Burton Holmes recently gave his celebrated travelogue on "Panama" at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, he was seriously interrupted by continual coughing of the audience. Many a good sermon, lecture or concert, is spoiled in the same way. No one any longer willingly and if people with coughs, colds, hoarseness and tickling in throat would use Foley's Honey & Tar Compound, they could quickly cure their coughs and colds and avoid this annoyance. It is a splendid household medicine and contains no opiates. Badger Drug Co.

Tragedy of Sir John Franklin

Mystery of the Loss of the Erebus and Terror in 1848.

Just at this time, the loss of Captain Scott and four of his party of intrepid heroes in the far South Pole, after their discovery of the South Pole, recall to the minds of the people the tragedy of the loss of Sir John Franklin's expedition in 1848. This has been called "the greatest mystery of the north," and the most remarkable fact about it is that it remains a mystery to this day. Barring a few records and relics discovered by various relief expeditions, not a word has ever been heard regarding the fate of the crews of Franklin's two ships, the Erebus and the Terror, after which by the way were named the gigantic twin volcanoes which form the gateway to the south pole.

Although the loss of Capt. Scott and four of his party constitutes the most tragic event of modern exploration, it is not nearly so appalling or complete as the loss of Sir John Franklin's expedition in 1848. This has been called "the greatest mystery of the north," and the most remarkable fact about it is that it remains a mystery to this day. Barring a few records and relics discovered by various relief expeditions, not a word has ever been heard regarding the fate of the crews of Franklin's two ships, the Erebus and the Terror, after which by the way were named the gigantic twin volcanoes which form the gateway to the south pole.

Stefansson and one or two other explorers have rated a tribe of so-called "blood" eskimos in the far north of Canada, who some people profess to believe are descendants of the members of the Franklin expedition, but there is no way to prove, and no direct account of the ultimate fate of the 134 officers and men who manned the two ships has ever been obtained. Then vanished from the ken of the civilized world, and all that we know of them thereafter is contained in two brief notes found more than ten years afterward by Capt. Francis L. McClintock, R. N., in a cairn near Cape Herschel.

Between 1847 and 1857 a number of relief expeditions were sent out by the British government, always without result, and finally the government announced that it was unwilling to risk more lives and property in the fruitless quest. But Lady Franklin refused to give up hope. By one means or another she scraped up a sum sufficient to purchase the screw-driven yacht Fox, a little vessel of 177 tons, and obtained the services of Capt. McClintock as commander. The Fox sailed for the north in the summer of 1857.

McClintock's Expedition. McClintock had scanty evidence for his guidance. Other expeditions had come across stray relics of the equipment of Franklin's party. One relief party even discovered the tombstones of three men who had died the first winter Franklin spent in the ice, 1845-46, and another found the track of a party of starving white men along the Fish river. But not a shred of concrete, definite evidence of the fate of the rest of the party had been returned by any of them.

It was on March 1, 1859, that McClintock and Carl Petersen, his interpreter, met a group of Eskimos from whom they got the first intelligence of Franklin's ships. The camp had been pitched near the magnetic pole. Cautiously the searchers approached the subject nearest their hearts. They knew the Eskimos' prejudice against the speaking of the dead and especially of the ships whose disintegrating timbers had furnished them with many spoils. A naval button on one of the women's dresses gave an opportunity for a question. The Eskimo said it had belonged to a white man who starved on an island. They also had iron knives made from materials found at the same place.

"These Eskimos had nothing to eat," says McClintock, "and no other clothing than their ordinary double dresses of fur; they would not eat our biscuit or salt pork, but took a small quantity of bear's blubber and some walrus." The whole village population, forty-five souls, accepted the invitation to barter. A number of relics of the Franklin party were acquired, including silver spoons and forks, buttons and wood from the wreck of the ships.

"None of these people had seen the whites," continues their journal. One man said he had seen their homes on the island where they died. Later a native declared that a ship had been crushed by ice in the sea west of King William's Land, but that all the people landed safely from her. This information bore out the vague reports heard previously, but the Eskimos themselves knew nothing of the second ship. Returning to the Fox, McClintock pursued his search. Sledge parties were sent out at various times. On King William's Land, April 20, 1859, two families of Eskimos were met.

Traces of Second Ship. Entering one of the snow huts, McClintock saw two snow shovels made of mahogany, a few spear handles, a box of English wood, two preserved meat tins and a deal case which apparently had contained a telescope or barometer. There was also a large knife, which an Eskimo said had been found on shore, where a vessel lay stranded.

Much inquiry elicited the fact that these natives had seen two ships. One had sunk in deep water; the other had been driven on the ice-clad shore. They said she was still there or what was left of her after their depredations. But when McClintock went in search of her afterward he could not find so much as a stray plank.

All the white men of the ship, according to the Eskimos, went away to the "large river," dragging a small boat or boats with them. In the following winter bones were found there. While McClintock was scouring the south coast of King William's Land with small success, however, Lieut. Hobson was leading another sledge party along the western shore. Their paths had converged near Cape Herschel, twelve miles from which McClintock came upon a note—and the record was to be the final message from Franklin's dying followers. Hobson had found the paper at Point Victory, on the northwest coast of King William's Land.

It was a twofold record written on one of the printed forms with which the British government was wont to supply outgoing explorers "for the purpose of being enclosed in bottles and thrown overboard at sea."

If any person finding one of these records is requested to forward it to the secretary of the admiralty, with a note of the time and place.

The note written first on this form was written, apparently, by Lieut. Gore, as follows:

28th of May, 1847. H. M. Ships Erebus and Terror wintered in the ice in Lat. 70 degrees 05 minutes N., long. 98 degrees 23 minutes W.

Having wintered in 1846-7 at Beechey Island, in lat. 74 deg. 43 min. 28 sec. N. long. 91 deg. 39 min. 15 sec. W. after having ascended Wellington Channel to lat. 77 deg. and returned by the west side of Cornwallis Island.

Sir John Franklin commanding the expedition.

Party consisting of 2 officers and 6 men, left the ships on Monday, 24th May, 1847.

G. GORE, Lieutenant.

McClintock points out that Gore was in error in giving the date 1847, as that of the winter spent at Beechey Island, as other evidence showed that the stay of the Franklin party there had been in 1846-7.

The second tragic note on the form was scrawled around the margin on a date almost a year after Gore's hopeful bulletin. It was as follows: "April 22, 1848. H. M. ships Terror and Erebus were deserted on the 22nd April, five leagues N. N. W. of this having been beset since the 12th September 1846. The officers and crews, consisting of 105 souls, under the command of Capt. F. R. M. Crozier, landed here in latitude 69 degrees 37 minutes 42 seconds north, longitude 98 degrees 41 minutes west. Since 1847, and the total loss by deaths in the expedition has been, to this date, nine officers and 15 men."

JAMES FITZJAMES, Capt. H. M. S. Erebus, F. R. M. CROZIER, Captain and Senior Officer, and start (on) tomorrow, 26th, for Back's Fish river.

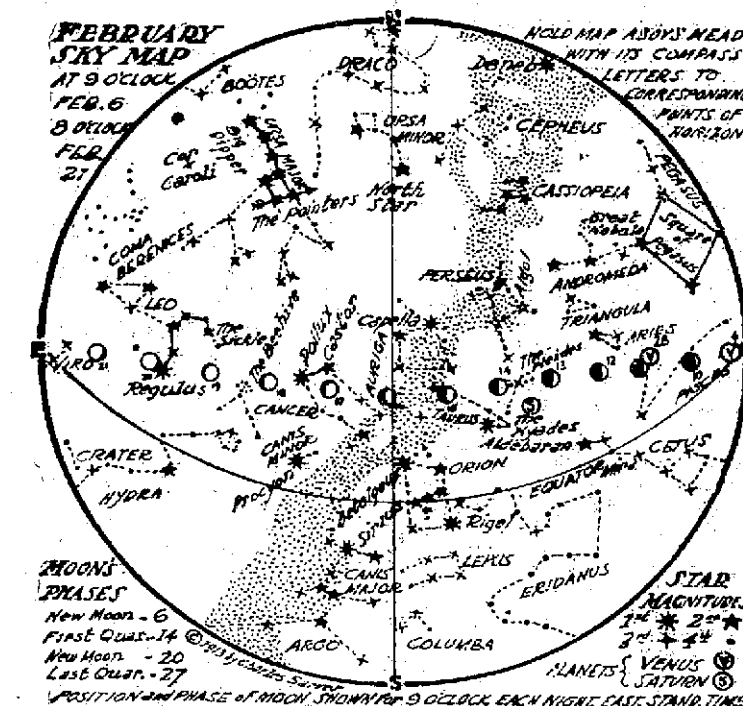

That was the last word, so far as is known, left by any member of the Franklin expedition.—New York Post.

THRIVING ON MIXED DIET.

"Can't one thrive very well on a mixed diet, if he controls his appetite?" Yes, thousands do and so can you. But if you were to ask a merchant whether one can't do very well without advertising or without taking inventory every six months, he will probably say, "Yes, but one can do much better by adopting the best system in the line of advertising and in accounting that he can learn from experts in those departments," and if you will investigate, you will find that those who have succeeded beyond the average have taken advantage of such systems in the conduct of their business. And why should not the same principles be applied to the management of oneself? Is the athlete more in need of proper hygienic training than the man who wants to make the most of life? Certainly a system can be adopted in diet and in all other means of efficiency that will give the same results that one gets from the proper management of his business.

The Heavens in February.

The splendid constellations of January are still to be seen in the evening sky during the month of February excepting a few which were then low in the west. The Great Square of Pegasus is the conspicuous figure in the western sky, which is otherwise usually barren of aspect. Denob drops from the roster of first magnitude stars as the month ends, but Arcturus is due to reappear in the northeast. The most brilliant belt in the heavens stretches overhead almost north and south, following the stream of the valley of the Milky Way. In the north are Cassiopeia in her throne; Perseus, with its wonderful variable star Algol; and tent-shaped Auriga, Southward are Gemini (The Twins), Taurus (The Bull) and the Dogs, Crap-

Sent a War Letter From Libby Prison.

Very few were the letters that Yankee soldiers, confined in the southern prisons, has the opportunity to send to loved ones at home. Every note that was written was subjected to the scrutiny of the Confederate officers before allowed to pass out and the boys in blue were never sure that their letters had been sent out. The following letter is interesting because it was written from Libby prison in the spring of '63, fifty years ago. There is nothing said about the conditions at the prison and the author had evidently just arrived there.

Dear Father:
I will write you a few lines whether it ever gets to you or not. I wrote the other day, but had to write under the superintendence of a seditious officer. I have seen more of the stern realities of war. On the 4th of March we, that is our brigade left Franklin to feel of the enemy. We went about four miles, when we encountered a rebel battery which opened upon us. Our battery was brought up and the fight lasted about an hour, when the rebels retreated, leaving fourteen dead, we had two wounded. We camped on the field, and the next morning advanced four miles further, when we again met them. We fought for five hours when our ammunition was all spent. Our battery and cavalry fled, when we were surrounded. We had a bloody fight. I think an average of one man in four was hit. We had thirteen hit in Company B. All the dead and wounded fell into the hands of the rebels. John Pomeroy was shot through the thigh. I can't name them all. I had several narrow escapes but was not touched, although I was in the midst of the hottest fire. We marched 75 or 80 miles, fording streams, and we lay on the ground nights, and it rained all the time; we were then robbed of our overcoats and sent to Chattanooga; from there we were sent here.

I expect the boys will leave before long, but it may be months before we shall get away. My health is good, and I think I can stand the confinement until weather pretty well, but don't think I will have to stay until then. I tell you we made our marks among the butternuts. They had fourteen thousand men, while we had less than three thousand. I go in for fighting them to the death. I can't write much as I will have to smuggle this out. I will tell you the rest when I get home.

Your son,
IRA P. NYE,
1st Lieut. Co. 22nd Regt.

WOULD MAKE STATE BANKS THE STATE DEPOSITORIES

Measures Which Would Eliminate the National Banks Will Be Introduced in Legislature.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 15.—Two measures will be introduced in the legislature Monday evening, one in the senate and another in the assembly, providing for the depositing of the state funds in the state banks. This is a new subject of legislation. Under the present plans the board of deposits, composed of the state treasurer, attorney general, secretary of state and governor, determine in which banks the state will deposit its money. There has always been a general distribution of these funds between the state and national banks. Governor McGovern in his message called attention to the fact that the national banks were not taxed on the same plan as the state banks. For this reason some discussion has arisen as to whether the state should not favor state banks as state depositories. It is also claimed in favor of the bill that the state banks are regularly inspected by the state banking department and that the state has no method of supervising national banks.

It is understood that the subject of depositing all of the funds in state banks has been often discussed by the state board of deposits, but it has always been deemed advisable to get legislative action upon the subject. The claim is made that there has not been a failure of a state bank in ten years, where the depositors lost a cent of money.

DINNER STORIES

Spiffin and Miffin were friends. They were strolling along one sunny Sunday afternoon in the rear of their respective wives, when Spiffin who was always something of a warrior, broke the contented silence.

"Look here, old man," said he, "I know you say the most awfully nice things about me to my face, and I've no reason to believe you do anything else behind my back. But it bucks a chap up to be criticized by his friends."

"ever now and then, you know," asked Miffin, mildly sniffing the clear and frosty air.

"I do," answered Spiffin, throwing out his chest and striking it impressively. "It would do me all the good in the world."

Miffin looked sideways at his friend and then burst out:

"Look here, Spiffin, you're six foot two; I'm five feet four. You can't seriously mean you want my private opinion of you. It can't be done, old chap—can't be done!"

The occasion was a choice little tea you'd be standing on them yourself."

Washington and Lincoln on Affairs of Today

HE shade of Lincoln paused before the shade of Washington, who was nonchalantly reclining under a cherry tree near the banks of the Styx.

"They are having great doings today in your honor, back yonder," said Lincoln.

"Yes," replied Washington, with a sigh. "But I wish it wasn't quite so much feasting and talk. They get together, eat a fine dinner, make a lot of speeches about the glorious future and the glorious past, and every body feels pretty well satisfied with himself and his country; and then the next day, they go back to their grafting, or their sweat-shopping, or their stock gambling, and I can't see that the celebration of my birthday has done very much real good. I am afraid the only tangible results are bills and indigestion."

"You might think you had attended one of your own dinners," said Lincoln. "You seem to be suffering from the 'day after' feeling."

"I am just as much interested in their affairs," said Washington, "as if I was down there in the thick of the fray. And I tell you, they've got some pretty big problems on their hands."

"Yes, every age has its problems. There would be no progress if I didn't. But you can trust the people. The heart of the American people is sound and beats true."

"But the American people of today are not the American people of your time or my time," said Washington with a melancholy shake of his head. "There was a certain homogeneity of belief and blood then, that we could count on. But it is too heterogeneous now. Every fellow is for himself."

"It only seems that way because nothing comes up to bind them together. But there is a feeling abroad there now that is bigger and finer than anything of our day. We had some of the biggest questions to settle the country ever wrestled with. But it was the very thing that these were concrete problems, that here was some actual thing to do, that helped settle them. But now, it is more the abstract questions of right and wrong, the abstract question of brotherhood, that is beginning to permeate and leaven. Every one of our countrymen is beginning to feel that it is up to him to help stop grafting, to take care of the alien that comes, to aid in stamping out tuberculosis, to lend his influence to prevent child labor. It is coming home to each one that he is his brother's keeper. It is a magnificent spirit, but it is not so easy to enlist in its cause, as to join an actual army marching away to fight an actual war. But it is the spirit of the American of today. And we can trust it, brother, to struggle to victory, just as the spirit of liberty won out in your day, and the spirit of union in mine."

"Well, maybe," said George, brightening. "It certainly was a pull in my time. Yet every man stood to his guns."

"And it certainly was a pull in mine," responded Lincoln. "Yet, no one faltered. So you needn't fear for the present. I have not lost my faith in the people. In the moment of test, you can depend upon them to line up with the right."

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

OTHER PEOPLE'S GRIEVANCES.

THERE are some people in this world to whom righteous indignation seems to be a source of much pleasure. They feel it in behalf of other people, who have been mistreated by their friends or relatives, and who usually do not seem to feel it for themselves.

And they air this indignation at every opportunity, and appear to feel they are adding to their own stock of virtue in thus championing the oppressed.

Do you recognize the class I mean?

A neighbor of mine is a charter member of this class. She can find grievances for anyone; some of them I feel sure would astonish the unconscious sufferers. An interview with her seldom passes without one of these vicarious complaints.

Yesterday she dropped in to tell me about a wedding she had attended, and this was the part of her tale which she told with the most vim: "My dear, what do you think the bride's only brother gave her? Nothing but two silver spoons, and they are not good people at all. It must have almost spoiled the wedding for her. I felt dreadfully when her mother showed them to me, for they had always talked so much about Harry and how kind he was."

Now I don't know the bride intimately, but I do know her well enough to realize that she is a placid, cheerful person, and not at all the sort to have her wedding spoiled because her brother only gave her two silver spoons. I don't think she'd be half so indignant about it as my kind neighbor is, if he gave her nothing at all.

Again, we have a mutual friend whose only daughter is teaching in a distant city. Usually she comes home to spend Christmas with her mother, but this year for some reason best known to themselves, she failed to. That vicarious grievance lasted my neighbor all the holiday season. She went about saying, "Wasn't it too bad that Emma didn't make the effort to come home Christmas?" I feel so sorry for poor Mrs. Richards. I am afraid Emma isn't as thoughtful of her mother as she should be."

Another neighbor of ours who entertains her relatives a great deal, seldom goes away from home. "Considering all the company Mrs. C. has, I don't think she gets entertained very much," fulminates the grievance bearer. "I should think that those cousins of hers who come here every spring and fall would have her visit them occasionally."

As it happens, Mrs. C. has very good reasons of her own for preferring to extend hospitality rather than accept it, and repeatedly refuses urgent invitations from those particular cousins.

Sometimes these grievance inventors cause real trouble, for it not unreasonably happens that their complaints occasionally reach the ears of those complained against, and are falsely credited to the people to whom the grievance really belonged.

And then, again, they sometimes become so bold as to try to persuade the unconscious sufferers themselves, that they are being mistreated, which, as everyone can see, is a terrible source of trouble.

On the whole unless you are able to alleviate or smooth them out, other people's grievances are a good thing to let alone, especially when they are not troubling the owners.

TALKS WITH MOTHERS

By GERTRUDE STEVENS AYEES.

The Layette (continued)
Three strips of medium weight flannel five inches wide should be furnished for the first.

Bands.
These should be torn across the flannel and should not be hemmed. The fastidious woman may turn the edges out and fasten them lightly. If the baby is expected to arrive in hot weather it is wise to provide three similar bands made of old, soft linen. These bands are used only while the navel is healing and are then replaced by the woven bands which should be put on; all wool shrinking too much from frequent laundering.

The woven bands and shirts may often be purchased at a sale of so-called "seconds". This means slight imperfections that do not affect the wearing quality.

Petticoats.
The three flannel underslips or petticoats should be made to button on the shoulders, the arm holes, shoulders and neck being bound in white silk scambinding. This furnishes an extra woolen covering over chest and back and ensures a more even temperature. If the child is to be born in cold weather, it is a good idea to cut them the same length as the dresses and with sleeves. These when washed will shrink just enough so they will fit inside the slips and can be adjusted with them in dressing the little one. By the use of such a petticoat the mother can safely remove wool from immediate contact with the skin in extremely hot weather.

Dresses.
Make the dresses of fine ripplette (such as is sold for underwear) cut in simple style with bishop sleeves or some other pattern having large opening for the arms and not more than twenty-five inches long when finished. I knew one mother expecting a July baby, who made all dresses twenty inches in length and the child simply grew into its short dresses, thus saving the mother many extra hours work and more expense. These with one or two nicer ones for best, purchased or made later, dressed the baby until it was a year old. They were cut with neck and sleeves large enough to fit the year old child, and fine linen insertion and edging furnished the opportunity to use different colored ribbons at wrist and neck. The fine linen lace is just as dainty as the cotton and much more durable. In these dresses no edging was used at the neck, the insertion and ribbon leaving the beautiful lines of the child's neck visible.

If you will only use the ripplette which needs little or no ironing to make it wearable you will be so thankful to have that time for reading, observation and recording items of interest regarding the child development and culture.

Wrappers.

The little wrappers, plainly yet daintily made, will furnish all the coats the baby needs while it is smuggled in pillows in the carriage. On rare occasions (and they should be very rare indeed) when the child is carried in the arms, a light woolen shawl may be wrapped around it in addition to the coats and leggings.

Socks and Stockings.

Covering the feet depends on the physical tone of the child and its environment. If the feet are warm to the touch, bare feet are allowable, but remember cold feet cause many an attack of colic.

Diapers.

Good cotton diapers are the most satisfactory to use. Linen, when wet, is too cold and domat or other cotton flannel does not absorb quickly enough and steams the baby in warm weather. Forty diapers are a necessary and eighty are found to be a plenty. Provide some 18 inches wide and a smaller number (twelve or twenty-four) 28 inches wide. Those made of 18 inches diaper should be twice as long as wide and those made of the wider cloth should be square, measured after hemming in each case. If you can find in your own linen closet or bag from your friends, several old table cloths, make up twenty-four small diapers about 15 inches by 10 inches to be used the first few weeks.

In addition, have many six squares of old soft linen and cotton to be placed inside the diapers. These can be turned when soiled and thus save the new mother or maid much disagreeable work. You can use several hundred of these although the size should change as the baby grows. I would advise against furnishing squares for the nurse as too often I have known them to avoid the little extra work necessary to wash and iron those used but not soiled. It does not take long to thus exhaust the entire body supply. Later when the youngster is older paper diapers serve the same purpose effectively but of course are expensive as they cannot be washed and dried for further use when only wet.

All diapers prepared should be washed thoroughly and ironed to remove any dressing in new cloth and starched with old. Now and then only pure white soap should be used to launder all the baby things as washing powders and strong soap often cause troublesome irritation.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

BE RIGHT, tho' pain and anguish be thy lot, Thy heart will cheer thee, when the pain's forgot, Do wrong for pleasure's sake, then count thy gains. The pleasure soon departs, the sin remains. —Bishop Shuttleworth.

COMPANY DISHES.

When entertaining company, a few choice dishes are always appreciated. Fancy cookery is nothing but plain cooking with a few frills.

Creamed Oysters in Loaf.—Cream oysters as usual and serve them in a baker's loaf. Remove the top with a nice, clean cut and scoop out the center of the loaf, leaving a framework, butter well on the inside and brown in the oven. Fill with creamed oysters and serve on a bed of lettuce leaves. Creamed sweetbreads, or mushrooms are equally good served in this way.

Macedoine Salad.—Season with French dressing a cup of diced potatoes, carrots, peas and string beans, all cooked. Arrange on lettuce leaves in four sections. Heap a teaspoonful of boiled dressing on each; garnish with hard cooked eggs and parsley.

Ice Cream in Case.—Bake angel food in a round tin; when cold cut out the center, leaving a shell thick enough to hold vanilla ice cream; cover with whipped cream and serve at once.

Braised Tongue.—Cook a beef tongue slowly for two hours, then skin it and put it into a casserole. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add three of flour and cook well; add a pint of water in which the tongue has cooked, a pint of stewed and strained tomatoes. Heat until smooth and thick, add half a carrot cut fine, one chopped onion, half a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, a few dashes of red pepper and the tongue. Cover and simmer for two hours. Serve from the casserole.

Why He Took Lessons From Cooking Expert.

Here's a young man who succeeded in business simply because he learned to cook before he started out. He isn't a chef, either. In fact, he's a stove salesman.

His father owns one of the largest stove factories in the country. The young man aspires to be a member of the firm.

"Certainly," said Dad, "but you must learn your way first." Then he suggested that the boy introduce their gas ranges in southern Europe, where stoves are poor and people are hard to change.

"Before you go," suggested the father, "better take some cooking lessons. Go to the best cooking expert in town and get her to show you how to use our range."

So the young man called on the cooking expert and she said she'd take him for a pupil if he was really serious about it.

The boy said he was serious.

A few days later he went for his first lesson. While he stood by the cooking expert made one of her famous jelly rolls and some milk biscuits and roasted a piece of meat. He watched closely and the next time he came the cooking expert did the standing by, directing his every move, of course.

"When I come again I'll do it alone," he said.

He learned quick.

And he did just that. With the cooking expert for audience he made

"Well, that is wonderful," said the mother. "I never would have believed it had I not seen." And she fell to tasting the son's jelly roll, which was delicious, and his biscuits, which were equally good.

Orders flowed in. After one more lesson, for a few finishing touches, the young man started off to Europe.

At first he didn't get a warm welcome from the dealers in southern France and Italy, but when he had given one or two exhibitions of what he had learned from the cooking expert, he began to get orders.

Those people had never before seen anything like what he showed them. They looked upon his results as almost miraculous. In a short time he was the talk of the trade, and dealers flocked to see him do his "wonderful" cooking.

Of course, they wanted stoves that would do work of that sort! Of course, they wanted to know the way to make such admirable "jelly-roll."

Of course, the young salesman showed them how, and when he came back to his native land he brought so many orders for gas ranges that, even if he hadn't been a member of the family, he would have been made a member of the firm.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Useful Articles from Old Stockings.

PLAY MITTENS FOR THE CHILDREN.—Place child's hand or an old mitten, with thumb slightly extended, on top of old stocking. Little finger side of hand or fold of stocking, then start at tip of little finger and draw with chalk the shape of hand; sew on sewing machine, following lines, then cut out and turn. You have a neat, warm mitten.

UNDERDRAWERS FOR BABY.

FROM OLD STOCKING LEGS.—Cut top down about half way and sew together. Hem top and run rubber through. As these are black they do not soil easily and can be washed with very little trouble.

RUGS.—Commence at top and cut round and round an old stocking leg a strip an inch wide, until foot is reached. Sew strips together and wind on a ball. All colors of stockings and socks can be used. If these are woven into rugs honeycomb style, they will last for years.

The Table.
FRIED OYSTERS.—Drain carefully, remove all bits of shell, sprinkle with pepper and salt and set in a cool place for 10 or 15 minutes. Then, if oysters are small, pour them into a pan of crackers fine, add the liquor, mix well, let stand five minutes, add a little salt and pepper, mold into small cakes with two or three oysters in each, roll in dry crackers until well encrusted and fry in hot lard, butter or beef droppings. Serve hot in covered dish.

PALATABLE WAY OF USING UP SOUPMEAT.—Get about 15 cents worth of soupmeat, boil slowly in salted water until done, take out meat, strain broth, add about 5 cents worth chopped vegetables to the broth. Boil until vegetables are soft, cut up meat in pieces about size of a walnut, strain some of the soup over meat and thicken with a little flour and milk. Very good served with mashed potatoes. This makes a good meal for five people.

JAM CAKE.—One cup sugar, three-fourth cup butter, three eggs, 1½ teaspoons cloves, 1½ teaspoons cinnamon, one scant tablespoon soda in three tablespoons sour cream, one cup berries (juice and all), two cups flour. A little more flour may be needed—depends on amount of fruit juice. Cherries or any small canned fruit may be used instead of berries. Bake in three layers.

Things Worth Knowing.

TO FRIGIDEN VEGETABLES.—If juice of a lemon is added to a pan of cold water and wilted vegetables allowed to stand in water for half hour, they will be as fresh as when gathered. Especially good for lettuce, celery, spinach and parsley.

TO IMPROVE CANNED PEARS which are rather tasteless, pour off part of the juice and pour over them instead syrup made of sugar and water boiled together a few minutes, adding juice of an orange when syrup cools. IF YOUR FURNITURE or dining room table becomes white in spots from hot dishes or dampness, moisten a soft cloth in essence of peppermint and rub spots lightly; they will resume their natural color.

Feminine Extortions.

They are few and far between, but still they exist. This rare member of the sex is the girl who actually asks men companions to purchase her anything for which she may take a fancy. It is decidedly unfair to the man, and he makes the feminine thoughtlessness. He will soon desert a girl who has the weakness. It is surely unfeminine.—Exchange.

MADISON SOON TO HAVE AN OPEN AIR SCHOOL

Complete Equipment for One has Been Purchased by Local Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

(Madison Democrat)
An open air school for children afflicted with tuberculosis soon will be opened on the east side. The medical committee of the board of education yesterday met with Dr. A. G. Sullivan, medical supervisor of the public schools; Miss Martha K. Riley, trustee officer; Miss Mary D. Saxton, visiting nurse and others and it was decided to instruct the teachers' committee to find a teacher for the school.

It is proposed to find a suitable site, probably in the sixth ward, and lease the grounds on which will be erected a movable building. The Anti-Tuberculosis association, will furnish the outfit which consists of special tables for the children, coats and a kitchen. The pupils are to be permitted to rest and lunch at various times during the day.

According to Alderman Bourke, a member of the committee, several children afflicted with the disease do not attend school.

"The opening of this school is not a matter of charity," he said, "Under the law we are in duty bound to educate the children. It is only proper that we have a separate school for these children to prevent the disease from spreading."

Dr. Victor Lehner and Louis D. Sumner are also members of the committee.

Asistation for the establishment of open air schools was begun by the Anti-Tuberculosis association some two years ago. It is proposed to build the school large enough to accommodate about 16 pupils.

The local anti-tuberculosis association has purchased a complete open air school equipment. It includes a portable house of suitable size; 18 sanitary steel desks; 18 folding cots, that can be folded up so that they occupy a space of four inches by five inches by three feet; a stove, caps, felt boots and mittens for the children, a complete set of cooking utensils and dishes. The diet, blankets, tooth-brushes, etc., have been donated by private citizens.

The board will sustain the school for 10 children or more. The visiting nurse has offered to co-operate daily in taking children's weight and temperatures. They are undoubtedly 200 or 300 tubercular children, although but few of this number are in the advanced stages of the disease.

BIG PAVING PROGRAM DRAWN UP AT MOLINE

Moline Mail: Eighty-seven blocks of paving or five and three quarters miles is the plan of Commissioner Anderson for the coming summer. This improvement will represent an outlay of from $150,000 to $250,000. The plans contemplate the resurfacing of Third Ave. from First to Eighteenth streets, a much needed improvement and the paving of enough territory in the south-east part of the city to make this section one of the most desirable residential districts.

Cresote blocks will be used for resurfacing Third avenue. Three years ago, it was proposed to resurface this heavily traveled street with brick, but an estimate was made for cresote blocks which means an expense of about $75,000. At that time, several of the heavy property-owners objected on the grounds that cresote block had not been proven as desirable material for a street with heavy traffic. A little investigation, however, changed the view of the objectors and today, it is thought the improvement will go through without any objections upon the part of the large property owners.

ORNAMENTAL LIGHTING FOR MADISON STREET

As soon as the Wisconsin Telephone company has removed its poles on State street in the spring, the State Street Advancement association will be ready to proceed with the installation of the proposed ornamental lighting system.

Approximately $7,000 has been raised among the property owners for the new lighting system. It is proposed to erect ornamental posts on each side of the street the entire length of the street and eliminate the arc lights at the intersections. Because the state has appropriated $17,500 towards the improvement of State and Park street and University avenue the university regents did not contribute towards the lighting system, as they feel that the city should pay the cost of installing the new system in front of the university property. The city as yet has taken no action to make up the difference.

However, it is hoped by the members of the association that a satisfactory settlement can be reached with the city so as not to interfere with the installation of the lights.—Madison Democrat.

RACINE CHIEF OF POLICE PUT ON STRAIGHT SALARY

(Racine Times)
Instead of receiving $1,500 a year in addition to the fees connected with the health office, Chief of Police H. C. Baker will in the future receive a flat salary of $1,800 a year, if favorable action taken at last evening's meeting by the committee of the whole is ratified by the common council.

The aldermen voted unanimously in favor of the new salary basis, believing that it would save the city from $250 to $300 a year. Last year, it is claimed, the chief received over $725 from fees connected with the health office, which according to his present agreement with the city, became part of his pay. If the flat salary basis is adopted, the chief will receive $1,800 for his year's service, both as head of the police department and of the health board, and the money taken in from fees will go into the city treasury.

MUNICIPAL LABORATORY AT BELOIT COMPLETE

(Beloit News)
The new municipal laboratory is just about completed. In fact all the tables and the rest of the furnishings are in place. There remains only for the apparatus to arrive, which has already been sent for and the order acknowledged. It is thought that within a week or ten days the apparatus will be set in place and the new laboratory opened to the public for a couple of days.

LARGE GRAIN SHIPMENTS VIA THE HENNEPIN CANAL

(Sterling Gazette)
Last year over 300,000 bushels of grain were shipped out of Whiteside county on the Hennepin canal. It is expected that this amount will be doubled in 1913 for arrangements are now being made to ship grain direct from Whiteside county to Chicago. In addition the Boyden people, who operate the Whiteside county elevators along the Hennepin canal, are making preparations to build elevators along the main line of the canal.

Last year the grain was shipped to Peoria, and now plans are being made to have the Morgan people, the firm that established the boat line between Chicago and Davenport, carry grain to Chicago on the return trip. By this method it will give the farmers of Whiteside county direct access to Chicago by water.

It is known that the Boyden people would like to establish a terminal elevator at Sterling, and have the grain along the canal shipped here by water thence transported to Chicago by rail.

STOUGHTON WILL NOTE VOTE ON COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

Stoughton, Feb. 15.—Although Stoughton folk would like a chance to try the commission form of government, anticipating that it would bring relief from some of the undesirable features of the present administration, it is generally felt that the time is too late for such a move. The law allows two months before the mayor is required to call a special election to vote upon the issue, and this would bring the date before the first Tuesday in April.

It is believed that the cost of salaries in the administrative department could be materially reduced by commission government. The present expenditure is $2,400, divided $1,000 for mayor and $700 each for the councilmen.

PORTLAND MAY ISSUE BONDS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CITY

Portland, Ore.—Members of the park board and the Greater Portland

Plans Association have united to inaugurate a publicity plan to formulate sentiment for the adoption of a $2,000,000 bond issue to put the so-called Bennett plans for a more beautiful city into operation.

It is planned to use billboards, stereoscopic pictures in motion-picture houses, lectures by experts and the columns of newspapers to arouse the support of the people for the plan to improve the city's parks. It is hoped to submit the bond issue at the regular city election June 2.

Of the $2,000,000 asked the park board would expend $1,577,000 in the purchase of grounds and the balance in improvements. The board wishes to secure as many playgrounds as possible.

SMALL POX CASES COST MOLINE $50.00 PER WEEK

Moline's recent small pox cases are loading an unexpected burden of $50 a week or more onto the health department. With eight people housed in one home, and seven of them healthy, and six of them prevented from earning their living by their usual means of livelihood, it is the duty of the city to see that the people are given means of sustenance. Guard duty of two men causes an expense of thirty dollars weekly, while three dollars a day is being allowed for the board of the large family. A fuel bill and rent is still to be accounted for, the exact amount of those items being unknown, but it is realized that it means a substantial increase to the expense already incurred.

BIG CLEANING PLAN FOR NEW YORK CITY

New York.—Plans for a spring renovation campaign in all parts of the city, proposed by Commissioner Lefferts of the health department, have been approved by Mayor Gaynor. The work is contemplated on a wide scale. All city departments will co-operate to remove rubbish and dirt, clean cellars, roofs, yards, vacant lots, catch-basins and all streets. The plan also contemplates minimizing nuisances from smoke and chimneys and offensive odors and eliminating places that harbor flies and mosquitoes.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., GOES INTO COAL BUSINESS

Grand Rapids, Mich., is to sell coal at $7.50 a ton to its inhabitants. All orders accompanied by cash are to be tendered to the board of health.

This will be a saving of $1.00 a ton to citizens from the price charged by local dealers. Here at last is a concrete, business scheme for reducing the cost of living.

Nearly two weeks ago, the Council of Grand Rapids adopted an ordinance allowing the health department to buy coal from a Buffalo dealer at $6.25 a ton, and sell it at $8.25. The mayor thinking he could do better, investigated, and found that the price was still too high. He also found that a local company would distribute coal for 50 cents a ton. At the same time came a break in the local coal dealers' ring, and the retail price came down. The upshot was that it was found that municipal coal could be sold at a 45 cent profit for $7.50 a ton. Two hundred tons have been bought and orders are streaming in.

MAY VACCINATE TRAMPS
(For du Lac Commonwealth)
Wausau health authorities plan to vaccinate all tramps who spend the night in the jail. Let them just advertise the plan widely enough and they will probably have no tramps to vaccinate.

A Car For Fire Chief.
The bid of W. H. Hobbs on the fire chief's car was accepted yesterday by the council. The car is a Chrysler, Model 17, with the price is $1,475.—Bau Claire Leader.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

THE TENOR.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

"THE tenor is a human being with a sky-scraper attachment to his voice and a desire to monopolize the conversation. A strong, meaty grand opera tenor will throw his voice ahead of the accompaniment for several miles and burn holes in the atmosphere, in order to remind people that he is still on the stage. Nothing will give a tenor an acute attack of the artistic temperament quicker than to lose out in a brisk debate with the kettle.

The tenor is a very scarce article, and when one strays into a village choir he is greeted with the fatted calf and allowed to perpetrate a solo every Sunday morning. Every tenor wants to sing higher than nature intended him to, and in order to accomplish this he frequently has to unbutton his collar and set his teeth. Some tenors never take a high note without assuming an appropriate hicc and landing one full tone below the required altitude, thereby causing critical members of the congregation to wish that they had remained at home and read some diverting book.

There are two distinct varieties of tenor—robust and lyric. The robust tenor is one who can be heard at the further end of the next township, on a still night. If he is real robust, people sitting in the twelfth row of the second gallery have to change their seats in order to get out of the draft. Robust tenors are seldom bothered by any particular method, but simply, own up and go to it.

The lyric tenor is a human flute with a tremolo stop. His chief business in life is to sing cradle songs at pink teas and draw tears from the eyes of guests who take theirs with variations. The long suit of the lyric tenor is hydraulic love songs which assure everybody that the undersinger will never forget the fast, lingering kiss at the gate, just prior to father's appearance with a hickory cane.

For some reason or other, nearly all tenors become fat before they have gotten far upon their career in crime. This is no doubt due to the fact that they breathe deeply. Occasionally they cause people who hear them to breathe deeply, too.

The STOLEN SINGER

by MARTNA BELLINGER

COPYRIGHT 1917 THE DOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

When Jimmy got back to the deck he saw that the groups had gathered on the port side. Sharp orders were being given. He crowded to the railing, straining his eyes to see, and found that they were transferring the ship's company to the boats. A rope ladder swung from the deck to a boat beneath, which bobbed like a cork beside the big, plunging yacht. Two people were in the boat, a sailor standing at the bow, and a large muffled figure of a woman sitting in the stern. Jimmy at once knew her to be the apathetic fat woman he had seen a few minutes before on deck. His eye searched the company crowded about the top of the rope ladder, and suddenly his heart leaped. There she was, at the edge of the deck, waiting for the captain to give the word for her to descend to the boat below. As Jimmy's eyes grew accustomed to the darkness, he saw her more and more plainly, a pale face framed in a dark hood, a tall, cloaked figure waiting calmly to obey the word from the superior officer.

It was the third time Jimmy had seen her, but he felt as if he had found one dearer than himself. His eyes dwelt on her. She was not terrified; her nerves were not shaken. "I am ready," she said, turning to the captain. It was the same fine, free voice, suggesting—Oh, what did it not suggest! Never this dark, wild night of danger! Jimmy thrilled to it again as he had thrilled to it once before. He waved jubilant hands. "Agatha Redmond!" he called, across the space, and heads that divided them.

Whether she heard his call he did not know. At that moment the word was given, and she turned an almost smiling face to the captain in reply. She knelt to the deck and got footing on the slippery rope. Men above held it and helped as best they could, while the sailor below waited to receive her into the little boat. She was steady, and quick as a woman in such a perilous position could be. As she descended, the rowboat, insecurely held to the Jeanne D'Arc, slid sternward a few feet; and while she waited in midair for the boat to be brought up again, the Jeanne D'Arc gave a mighty plunge. The captain shouted from the deck, a sailor yelled, then another; the dipping sea tossed the yacht so that for an instant the boat below and the woman on the ladder were hidden from Jim's view. He climbed over the rail and edged along the narrow margin of the deck until he was a few feet nearer the rope, his heart thumping with fear of calamity.

And even as the thought came, the thing happened. The wrenching of the ropes, insecurity of their fastenings, some blunder on the part of the seamen—whatever it was, the rope loosened like a filament of gauze, and, with its precious burden, dropped into the angry water. Before a breath could be drawn, the black waves churned over her head.

As, for the second time, Jim saw disaster engulf the Vision that had such power over him, he was seized by a cold numbness. "Oh, you brutes!" he groaned aloud; but his groan had scarcely escaped him when he heard loud altercation among the men, and in a moment, the usual tones of Monsieur Chateaufort commanding:

"Never mind! Quick with the boat on the other side!"

The seamen rushed to the opposite side, now impatient to make the boats. In the fear that was growing momentarily upon the men, there was no one to give a thought to the vanished woman. Jimmy clung to the rail for a second, peering over the water. With a cry of gladness he saw her pale face rise to the surface of the water several feet away and toward the bow.

"Keep up a second! It's all right!" he shouted. Quick as thought he snatched a life preserver from its place on the rail, and ran forward.

If you are out of a job, or would like to change your occupation, let me want ad do the soliciting for you.

him? Surely there were other boats. He raised his voice and called again and again. At last one voice, careless and brutal, called back something in reply. Jim turned questioning eyes to the girl beside him, whose pale face was discernible on the dark water.

"He says the boats are all full."

"Then we must hurry and make for the yacht. Where is she?"

The Jeanne D'Arc had slipped away from them into the darkness.

"She was this way, I thought. Yes, I am sure," said Agatha, pointing into the night. But though they swam that way, they did not come upon her. They turned a little, and then turned again, and presently they lost every sense of direction.

In all his life Jim was never again destined to go through so black an hour as that which followed the abandonment of the Jeanne D'Arc. His courage left him, and his spirit sank to that leaden, choking abyss where lights did not exist. Since the immediate object of saving the ship, for which he had worked as hard as any other, had been given up, the next in importance was to save the woman who, for some mysterious reason, had been aboard. It was beyond his power of imagination to suppose that any other motive of action could possibly prevail, even among her enemies. That they should leave her to drown, while they themselves fled to comparative safety in a boat, was more than he could believe.

"Surely they do not mean it; they must return, for you, at least." The girl beside him knew better, but she was conscious of the paralyzing despair of her companion's heart, and made a show of being cheerful. "When they find they are safe they may think of us," she said. "But the men were already crazed with fear, even before the leak was discovered. One of their mates on the voyage over was a fortune-teller, and he prophesied danger to them all on their next trip. After they had come into port, the fortune-teller himself died. And who can blame them for their fear? They are all superstitious; and as no one ever regarded their fears, now they have no regard for anybody's feelings but their own."

"But we are in the middle of the Atlantic, no one knows where. We may drift for days—we may starve—the Lord only knows what will happen to us!"

Agatha, who had been floating, swam a little nearer and laid her hand on Jim's shoulder, until he looked into her face. It was full of strength and brightness.

"The sea is his," she quoted gently. "Besides, we may get picked up, for my part, as you see. Can swim or rest floating, thanks to this blessed cork thing, and not at all hurt by the fall from the rope. But I must get rid of my shoes and some of my clothes, if I have to swim."

It is awkward to kick off one's shoes and divest oneself of unnecessary clothing in the water, and Agatha laughed at herself as she did it. "Not exactly a bathing suit, but this one black skirt will have to do. The others must go. It was my skirts that caused the mischief with the rope at first. And I was scared!"

"You had a right to be," Jim helped her keep afloat, and presently he saw that, freed from the entanglement of so many clothes, she was as much at home in the water as he. Suddenly she turned to him, caught by some recollection that almost eluded her.

"I don't think we are anywhere near the middle of the Atlantic," she said thoughtfully. James was silent, eating the bitter bread of despair, in spite of the woman's brave wish to comfort him. They were swimming slowly as they talked, still hoping to reach the yacht. They rose on the breast of the waves, paused now and then till a quieter moment came, and always kept near each other in the pale blue darkness.

"Old Sophie said something—that some one had tampered with the wheel, I think. At any rate, she said we'd never get far from shore with this crew."

James considered the case. "But even suppose we are within a mile or two, say, of the shore, could you ever swim two miles in this heavy sea?"

"It is growing calmer every minute. See, I can do very well, even swimming alone. It must be near morning, too, and that's always a good thing." There was the shadow of a laugh in her voice.

"Morning? That depends," growled Jim. He was being soothed in spite of himself, and in spite of the direfulness of their situation. But bad as the situation was, and would be in any case, he could not deny the proposition that morning and daylight would make it better.

"But aren't you tired already? You must be," James turned closer to her, trying to read her face. "It was a long night of anxiety, even before we left the boat. Weren't you frightened?"

"Yes, of course; but I've been getting used to frights of late, if one can get used to them." Again there was the laugh in her voice, under all its seriousness, even when she added: "I'm not sure that this isn't safer than being on board the Jeanne D'Arc, after all!"

It was characteristic of James that he forbore to take advantage of the opening this speech offered. The possible reason of her abduction, her relation to Monsieur Chateaufort—it was all a mystery, but he could not, at that moment, seek to solve it. Her remark remained unanswered for a little time; at last he said: "Then the Jeanne D'Arc must have been pretty bad."

"It was," she said simply.

Jim wondered whether she knew more about the crime of which she was the victim than he knew, or if she had discovered aught concerning it while she was a prisoner on the yacht. Granting that her person was so valuable that a man of Monsieur Chateaufort's caliber would commit a crime to get possession of it, why should he have abandoned her when there was plainly some chance of safety in the boats? He could not conceive of Monsieur Chateaufort's risking his neck in an affair of gallantry; cupidity alone would account for his part in the drama. James went over and over the situation, as far as he understood it, but he did none of his thinking aloud. It flashed on his mind that Miss Redmond must already have separated him, in her thoughts, from the other people on the yacht; though perhaps her trust was instinctive, arising from her own need of help. How could she know that he had risked his neck twice, now, to follow the Vision?

David W. Two months ago I was taken with a very severe cold and felt that I was on the very verge of grip. The head keeper of the lighthouse told me that Father John's Medicine did more permanent good for his daughter than all other medicines she had ever used and so heartily recommended Father John's Medicine, that I got him to buy me two large bottles in Baltimore. THE DAILY NOVELETTE

A WOMAN'S WORLD
The cowbirds swooned in the purple sea
The blue mist crept o'er the dankous sea

And all was rather solemn.
"I must tell you, I must tell you tonight, soon, now!"

Her voice rose as she proceeded, although she remained seated.

"My love," he begged, "if it's anything too, too, you know, spare yourself. I know there is nothing about you that could make the slightest difference in the way I feel toward you."

And he kissed her soundly to give her a slight inkling of the way he felt.

"It may separate us forever," she pursued. "But tell you I shall. The secret haunts me, Harold, I have an artificial tooth. The dentist put it in one day seven years ago. Harold, it is on a pivot."

Her shamed head sank, but he lifted her face gently from the chin up and kissed her again.

"Nothing, nothing, can make any difference," he whispered. "And now, my angel, to show you what an old world it is, I will tell you that I, too, have an artificial tooth, nay, three of them; here, here, and here."

He tapped them as he spoke. They gave forth a hollow sound, though his dentist had been highly recommended.

Ah, what is she doing. Goodness, she is receding from him!
"You who I thought was perfect!" she cried. "Get! Get! before I smite you in my aversion!"
"It's a woman's world!" he muttered bitterly as he reached for his hat.

Wife's Ashes as an Ornament.

An ingenious method of disposing of the ashes of a cremated body has to be recorded. After a woman had been cremated the husband took the ashes to a chemist for the purpose of extracting the iron, which he is now wearing set in his ring, as one would a diamond.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, February 15, 1873.—Last night two young men who are had characters started together, to attend a party in the fifth ward. With them they had the inevitable bottle. Near the railroad round house the two became quarrelsome and in the course of their demonstration one of them struck the other over the left eye with the bottle, the blow rendering him senseless and inflicting a severe wound. He fell to the ground and his assailant ran away. This morning about five o'clock the victim was found and taken into the round house nearly dead from the loss of blood. The blow from the bottle had severed an artery and the life current had been oozing from the wound all night. The physicians who attended the victim think that his skull is not fractured and he considers the injured man's chances for recovery are fair. The man who struck the blow has not been seen since.

Several residences in Evansville were burglarized on Saturday evening, while the occupants were attending a musical convention.

The total receipts for the five nights of the oratorio of Esther are $1230.37. The distinguished Norwegian who addressed the Jews and Persians in his native tongue last night, at the banquet, knows how to tune pianos in seven different tunes.

The electors of Monroe village will not vote next Tuesday on a proposition to amend their charter so that the license money be paid into the city treasury. Monroe will have better luck than Janesville did if they succeed in carrying it through.
